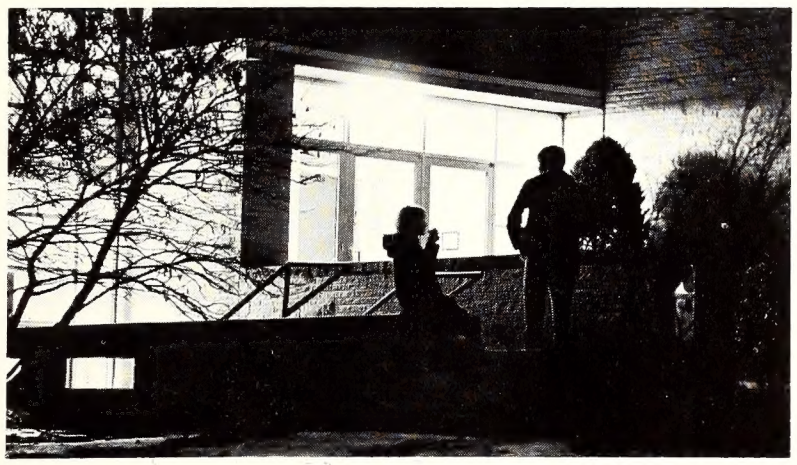
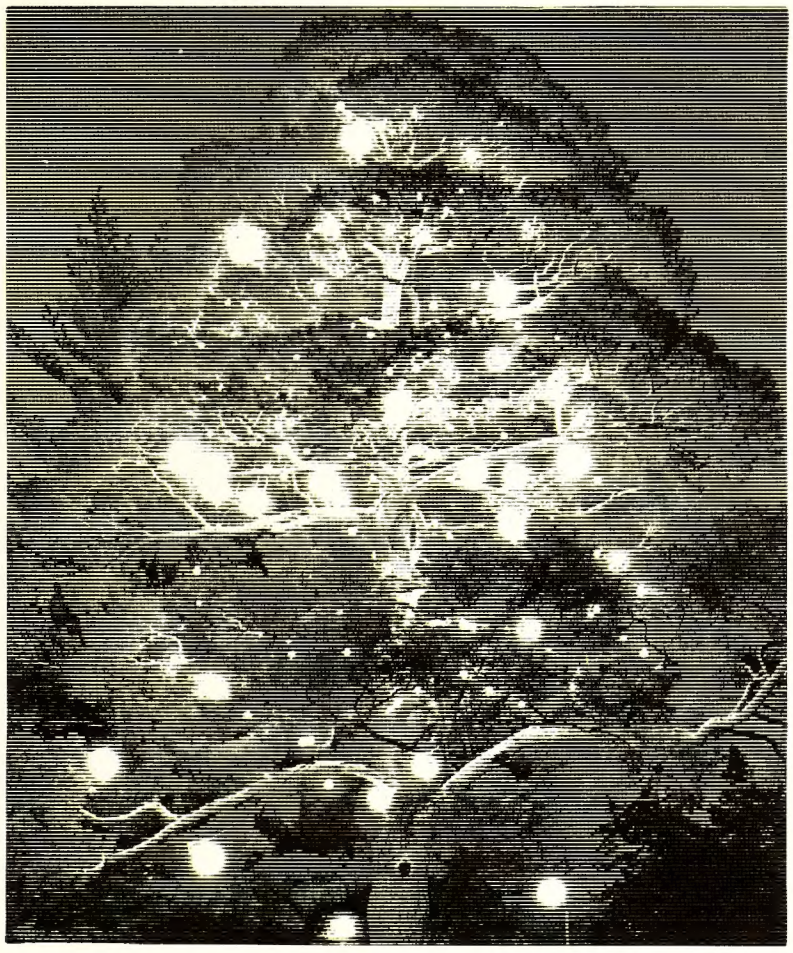
University: reflections of many contrasts





What comprises the University?
Is it relics of tradition or new shapes of progress jutting into the sky?
Does it grow young with each new class or age with the passing spring?
Does it mold the minds of youth into society's ideals or widen the limits of dissension?
Is the expression of creativity
or the learning of scientific truths
the essence of its classroom?
Does it produce anonymous masses or nurture men of independent spirit?
The University is a reflection of these contrasts. Its substance can not be defined precisely as it changes yet endures.

University: freshmen versus seniors

Freshmen and seniors are separated by a gap of a thousand experiences and memories yet the two are similar.

To the freshman, first impressions of his new environment are confusing, stimulating or a little frightening.

To the senior, expectations of his post-graduate life are heightened by ambitions and depressed by doubts.

The University is a link of maturation between the two, as the student adjusts to one world while preparing for another.

University: conformity versus dissension

What does conformity or dissent mean to a student?

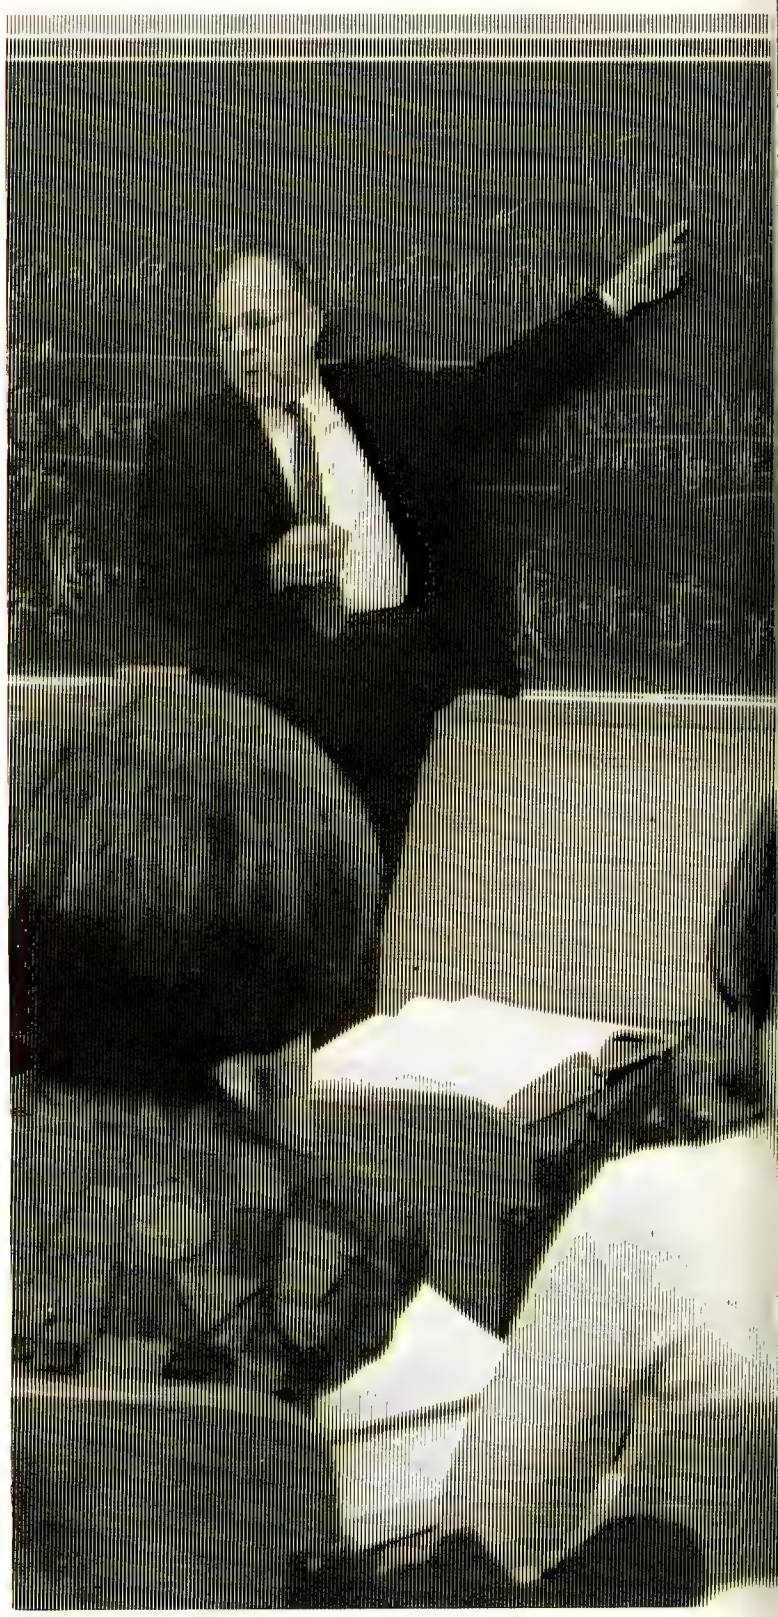
Is it the security of a group that reaffirms what the individual accepts or is it the satisfaction of standing apart from the crowd?

Intellectually, the student probes below the surface of others, seeking justification for accepting or rejecting their principles for living.

Sometimes he conforms to the dogma and dress of a group because it matches his personal beliefs and aspirations.

Sometimes he dissents through the signs and rhetoric of protest because it expresses his opinions and loyalties.

The University's atmosphere of freedom fosters both conformity and dissent.



University: creativity versus technology

Creativity in thought, in form, in the artist's eyes.

Symbols of man's knowledge, precise absolutes passed on from mind to mind.

Which is education? Is logic or emotion the foundation of learning?

The once-innovative perceptions of today will be neatly categorized and memorized by future generations as the work of centuries ago, now entombed in books, was once the brainstorm of a genius, who was scoffed at by his fellow academicians.

The student grapples with abstraction or marvels at reality as he learns.

And the University blends technology and creativity into education, teaching the student to utilize his talents.

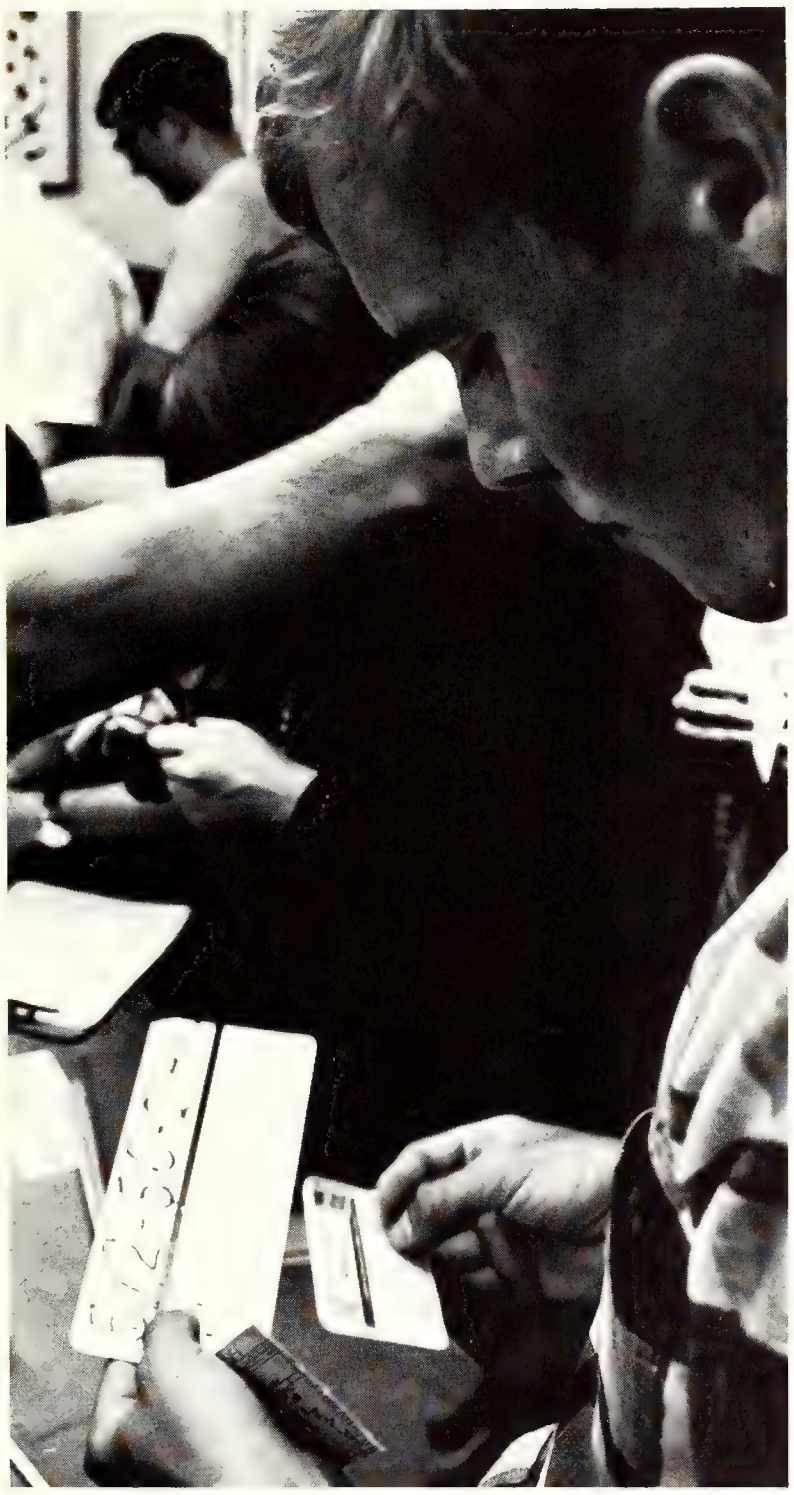
University: masses versus individuals



Mass or individual? Does the student know?

First a computer statistic, a lecture hall number, a card-waver in a sea of green and white.

Then he finds another who appreciates his uniqueness. He assumes new roles as friend, roommate, partner.

He learns to value solitude, sipping moments apart from the masses like wine.

And late at night, he ponders the significance of a philosophy reading or a chemistry experiment, judging it by personal dimensions.

The University shapes students into masses and individuals yet the student emerges with an identity that is his alone.

Features

Features enrich the social and academic spectrum of campus life. A Landon lecturer imparts national perspective to issues while a mock political convention gives expression to student opinions. Moods of a different emotion — the humor of Bill Cosby, the excitement of a band player, the intensity of a K-State Players' drama — help to relieve the daily pressures students face.

McCain confers degrees at night commencement

As the last function to be performed in Memorial Stadium, 1,115 degrees were conferred at the 1968 graduation exercises. Among those receiving diplomas was the fifty thousandth student to be graduated from the University. Coordinated by Dean Ellsworth Gerritz and Student Body President Bill Worley, the evening's program included a greeting from the Board of Regents and an address by Governor Robert Docking. For the first time, four undergraduate instructors were recognized for their overall excellence in teaching.

After gathering west of the Union, faculty members prepare to lead the graduates to commencement.

At the opening session of Orientation Week, President McCain advises students to take advantage of available opportunities and to assume influential roles as student members of the University community.

During a summer pre-enrollment session, the families of prospective students receive a guided tour of the campus. Lectures and meetings with the faculty also were used to familiarize parents with the University.

Parents receive insight into University education

New programs introduced aimed toward encouraging better attendance of freshmen at summer pre-enrollment and fall orientation. As new students went through pre-enrollment, their parents received a tour of the campus and were invited to attend various lectures designed to give them an insight into the social and scholastic experiences their children frequently would encounter while students at the University. New students were prompted to enroll in one of the freshman seminar programs featuring micro-labs which met informally during the fall semester.

In September, more than 1,500 new students participated in the orientation convention formulated to stimulate involvement in the University by freshmen and transfer students. Orientation Week also featured a micro-lab, the annual watermelon feed and outdoor dances.

MPC delegates project Rockefeller nomination

Delegates at the Mock Republican Political Convention nominated New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller for President on the third ballot and later selected Illinois Senator Charles Percy as his running mate. Kansas Congressman Bob Dole presented the keynote address to the more than 1,300 student delegates, chairmen and officers. An exercise in practical politics, MPC attempted to simulate a major party convention and to predict who would be chosen as the 1968 Republican Presidential nominee.

In order for votes to be cast accurately, students talked with other delegates and attended state delegate meetings. By becoming familiar with the candidates, procedures and issues, students were provided with an insight into the nature and workings of a national convention.

Rockefeller, Schlesinger talk as Landon lecturers

As part of a program to honor former governor Alf M. Landon, Nelson Rockefeller, Arthur Schlesinger and Mike Mansfield appeared in the Landon lecture series. While campaigning for the Republican presidential nomination, Nelson Rockefeller told a crowd of 8,000 in Ahearn Field House of the inadequacies and unfairness inherent in the structure of the present draft system.

Pulitzer Prize winner and noted historian Arthur Schlesinger appeared in November to present his evaluations of the 1968 presidential elections from an historical prespective. Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield explained American foreign policy being employed in Asia today in his "Pacific Perspectives" talk in early March.

After being named adjunct professor of political science, Landon conducted a series of informal public affairs seminars during the year.

Meetings, convocations feature national speakers

Appearing at University meetings and convocations, speakers of national and international reputations explained their ideas and goals. Part of the draft teach-in faculty, Dr. Benjamin Spock described his battle with his conscience over the Vietnam issue and outlined advice to draft resistors. Giving opposing views, the late Allen Dulles supported intervention in Vietnam and in an appearance sponsored by Young Americans for Freedom, Hilaire du Berrier advocated turning responsibility for the war back to the military.

Former Congress of Racial Equality director James Farmer traced the civil rights movement from the sit-ins of the 1950's to the present black power surge. With Josefh Hajda as his interpretor, Milan Machovec, Czechoslovakian educator and philosopher, explained the movement of the Czech people towards a democratic socialism and their struggle against Russian domination. South Dakota Senator George McGovern appeared as keynote speaker at the Frank Carlson symposium on World Population and Food supply while presidential write-in candidate Dick Gregory, upon his unexpected arrival at the August NSA convention, blasted current domestic policy and predicted another year of racial unrest for the U.S.

Drawing on his background in Vietnam, Hilaire du Berrier presents his views in a YAF-sponsored speech.

Home football halftimes entertain Big Eight fans

Special events featured during halftimes added to the festivities of home football games. At the 40th annual Editors' Day, 250 Kansas editors and publishers were hosted to a buffeteria luncheon and the Colorado State game. More than 6,500 bandsmen, representing 103 Kansas high schools, marched into formation during halftime at the Iowa State game to perform in the largest Band Day program in University history.

As Honorary Parents for 1968, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Warner received special recognition in a ceremony preceding the Missouri game. Topping off Parents' Day events, comedian Pat Paulsen entertained more than 4,300 students and their parents at an evening performance. An estimated 800 Kansas high school cheerleaders performed during the halftime at the Oklahoma State game.

Union maintains facilities for campus, state visitors

In addition to serving as a center for campus conferences and statewide meetings, the Union maintained a variety of service and recreational facilities open to all students and faculty. Among Union offerings were a snack bar and cafeteria, bookstore, supplies shop, lounge and art gallery. Low prices attracted students to the weekly movies at the Little Theater and to the bowling alleys and pool room located in the basement.

Members of the Union Governing Board completed a booklet containing a listing of Union policies applying to the use of the building's facilities by campus groups and revised their policy regarding posting notices of campus events.

Comics Cosby, Paulsen entertain campus crowds

Highlighting the 1968 spring campus entertainment series, comedian Bill Cosby, accompanied by singer Leon Bibbs, drew an estimated 4,100 persons to Ahearn Field House. While spacing the show with campus humor, Cosby performed his impressions of Fat Albert, Noah and My Brother With Whom I Slept. Earlier in the spring, the Fifth Dimension entertained approximately 2,000 persons with their original song and dance performance which featured renditions of their recent tunes "Up, Up and Away" and "Paper Cup."

Taking to the campaign trail with a political platform of "about two by six" and a desire to protect every American's basic "right to litter," Pat Paulsen wooed votes last fall before a record crowd of 6,000. Appearing in concert with Paulsen during the annual Parents' Day weekend were folk rock singers, the First Edition.

Alpha Delta Pi, Acacia capture first place in HQ

For their performance of "The Castle Hassle or Chastity Can Be a Goodman's Downfall," Alpha Delta Pi and Acacia won the 1969 Harlequinade. The one-act baroque play, written and produced by the sorority-fraternity team, also received the award for best choreography.

Second place honors went to Phi Delta Theta and Pi Beta Phi for their production of "Take a Hunch to Lunch or Never Play Ball With a Fullback." The skit also produced the winners of the best actor and best actress awards. Other skits featured Delta Zeta with Tau Kappa Epsilon and Gamma Phi Beta with Delta Upsilon.

Speakers relate views on news, ideas, controversies

Reflecting areas of current thought and development, Union News and Views speakers explored a wide area of topics. Seven Step Foundation originator Bill Sands revealed atrocities in prisons and Pearl Buck told of the problems faced by Amer-Asian children fathered by U.S. soldiers in Korea. Yitzhak Leor, press and information consul for the Israeli consulate in Chicago, gave his people's views on the Mid-Eastern conflict.

Future lunar explorations and the orbiting by the Apollo Seven crew were described by Albert Hibbs, leading space technologist. New Yorker critic Pauline Kael exchanged views on movies with her audience in an informal lecture.

Recognized for writing "The Feminine Mystique," Betty Friedan discussed the war between the sexes by focusing the destruction of marital unions. William Baird, abortion and birth control crusader, blamed voters for today's antiquated laws during his campus appearance in March. Writer Tom Wolfe traced the development of his writing in the subjective reality approach.

December blaze engulfs historical Nichols Gym

Fire claimed the second campus building in four years when Nichols Gymnasium was destroyed in December. Approximately 1,500 onlookers watched as Manhattan and student firemen, hampered by 15 degree weather, inadequate water pressure and strong north winds, attempted to contain the midnight flames.

Losses from the fire included a new radio transmitter, valued at $27,000, and an estimated $500,000 in rare instruments and sheet music belonging to faculty in the music department. Officials investigating the disaster suspected arson after discovering wooden tables, doused with a flammable liquid, stacked at one of the building's entrances.

In the spring, the Kansas legislature passed a bill appropriating approximately $1.5 million from the state's general welfare fund to finance the replacement of the 57-year old building.

Seemingly unaware of the danger of flaming branches falling nearby, students draw close to the building.

UFM curriculum offers creative study sessions

Designed to supplement classroom learning, seminars offered by the University for Man discussed topics ranging from interpersonal communication to the art of constructing and playing bamboo pipes. Students and faculty met informally in the homes of group leaders each week for a period of six to 10 weeks. Sessions could continue meeting if the group members decided to extend their particular seminar. Non-University personnel also were urged to participate in the UFM program, which featured all courses and discussion seminars on a non-credit, tuition-free basis.

Begun by English instructor Leonard Epstein, UFM boasted an enrollment of 650 students. During the year, plans were made for establishing a permanent classroom and office facilities.

Council offers speakers on religious alternatives

Alternatives to classical religious expression were offered through a series of speakers brought to campus by the Religious Council. Theologian William Hamilton discussed the possibility of religion without God while Muhammed Ali later advocated the separation of the black and white races. Hindu philosophy was the topic of Swami Ranganathananda and Dr. E. Yazdi discussed "Jesus in the Koran." Professor of Philosophy and Religion Charles Milligan enumerated major developments in the theology and the life of the church during recent years.

Directed by Dr. William Tremmel, the council also sponsored the film "This is Marshall McLuhan: The Medium is the Massage" and two University for Man seminar groups.

Adviser for religious activities at the University, William C. Tremmel also teaches classes in religion.

Negro, foreign students plan 'awareness' weeks

In an attempt to highlight the achievements of their community, Negro students arranged a week of events centered around the theme of "Black Awareness." Celebrated in conjunction with the National Negro History Week, activities included a religious song fest, an Afro-American dance and a display of Afro-American fashions.

Foreign students aimed to bridge cultural gaps during International Week in April. An essay contest in honor of the Ghandi Centennial on the topic "Is Non-Violence Dead?" was open to all students. Events during the week featured the annual Feast of Nations, a tour of Ft. Riley, a soccer game with the University of Kansas and the President's and People-to-People's teas.

More than 50 students participated in the University's first annual horse show sponsored by Block and Bridle. The two-night show featured competition in 12 events ranging from men's western pleasure riding to pole bending. Lacy Giltner and Larry Winstead, freshmen, were awarded top honors as the best all-around student performers.

Special events highlighting the show were the sorority goat tie, won by two members of Clovia 4-H House, and the men's boot scramble. Miss K-State Agriculture Diana Adams presented rosette ribbons to the winners of individual events.

Yell director encourages support of fans at games

In order to better associate activities of the cheerleading squad with those of the athletic department, grade requirements for the squad were changed this year for all freshman and sophomore applicants. A "yell leader" also was added to the 12-member squad to encourage more enthusiasm in the student Pep Club section.

Cheerleaders helped with the activities of Cheerleaders' Day last fall and earned an additional $450 through the sale of pom pons.

K-State Players stage classical, modern productions

After concluding last spring's productions with T. S. Elliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," the K-State Players opened their new season in the fall with the Broadway comedy hit "Luv." In October, Joel Climenhaga directed his original play "Marriage Wheel" which humorously attacked marriage by lot, a common practice which prevailed during the 19th century.

Another comedy, "The Mad Woman of Chaillot," later satirized the extremes of human nature. Written by French playwright Jean Giraudoux, it was directed by Betty Morgan. Two one-act plays by Tennessee Williams, "The Case for Crushed Petunias" and "The Gnadiges Fraulein," respectively focused on the importance of living and the South's era of decadence.

Coeds reign as queens of yearly campus events

Kathy Warner's modeling of fashions to fit particular occasions won her the title of Best Dressed Coed. Agriculture students chose Diana Adams as the 1969 Miss Agriculture after she performed basic farming skills on Chore Night and demonstrated her knowledge of agriculture by answering questions put to her by students.

As Military Ball Queen, Margaret Hummel reigned over the annual dinner-dance sponsored by Scabbard and Blade at the Ft. Riley NCO Club. Members of the Army ROTC honorary also escorted the 25 candidates to the queen's tea. Other coeds crowned in the spring were Jan Lindgren as Miss K-State American Royal, Sharon Stoeker as Miss Kansas Wheat and Susan Haymaker, selected as Little Colonel.

Namath picks Johnston as Royal Purple Queen

New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath selected Michaela Johnston, representing Boyd hall, as the 1969 Royal Purple Queen and Judy Creviston, Ann Foncannon, Joy Hanson and Linda Smith as the four runners-up. The five coeds, chosen from 28 candidates on the basis of photogenic beauty in black and white portraits sent to Namath, were notified of their selection as finalists by the presidents of their respective living groups. The queen's name was withheld until announced the first day of distribution of the Royal Purple.

Publications board adds magazine to replace UE

Acting on a recommendation for a change, the Board of Student Publications replaced the newspaper format of the University Edition with a 128-page magazine entitled "Dimensions." The publication, containing basic orientation information, was mailed to all new students entering the University in the fall. Other changes receiving board approval included an updating of policies for the Collegian Desk Manual, the addition of IBM typesetting equipment and the implementation of a new system to centralize photography.

Supervising the activities of both the Collegain and the Royal Purple, Jim Morris was named the new director of Student Publications in the fall. Morris, assisted by graduate adviser Sharon Smith and six faculty and student members, carried out policies dealing with student publications.

Formerly at Kilgore College, Jim Morris completes his first year as director of student publications.

Number of sales, pages increase for Royal Purple

Students set new records for Royal Purple sales by purchasing approximately 8,000 individual pictures and 8,300 copies of the 1969 RP. Editor Vic Shalkoski expanded the number of yearbook pages to 700, an increase of 12 over last year, and replaced color photographs of the academic deans with color pictures of students engaged in various academic pursuits within their respective colleges. The 1968 Royal Purple received the RP's 33rd consecutive All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press, thereby maintaining its distinction as the nation's yearbook with the longest string of All-American awards. More than 40 students worked on the 1969 Royal Purple.

Collegian staff changes nameplate, type, layout

With the installation of computer typesetting last fall, the Collegian became a completely cold type operation. The most efficient and modern technique in typesetting, computer typesetting helped speed up backshop operations.

Fall editor Liz Conner emphasized balanced news coverage of local and wire stories. More special sections and an arts section were added to the morning daily. An editorial board, composed of three staff members and the editor, was created in December to assist in formulating editorial policy.

Spring editor Sandy Dalrymple created a new nameplate using increased white space. Wider columns, larger pictures and a revised editorial page layout completed the makeup changes.

Collegian business staff promotes special sections

To compensate for a $5,000 deficit incurred by last year's directory, the University Directory was changed last fall to a more economical format. The most significant change came with the use of newsprint paper and the photographing of IBM cards for direct page printing. By using the IBM cards, processing of the directory was to be finished faster than in previous years.

Having a total circulation of more than 6,500 issues, the summer Collegian went to press three times a week under the direction of editor Ray Wilkerson. Collegian advertising throughout the school year accounted for an estimated $85,000 income. Advertising managers Jerry Reppert and Fred Boger supervised the sales and layout of all advertising as well as three special sections and spring and fall fashion editions.

At KSRH, amateurs learn the basics of broadcasting while providing entertainment to hall residents.

KSDB loses facilities; KSRH expands program

After the fire which completely destroyed its facilities in Nichols Gymnasium, KSDB-FM began broadcasting again in February from temporary space donated by KMAN radio. Manned by a staff of 53 students, the campus station added several new programs to its schedule including a contemporary music review, a comedy spoof series and a series of features on Russian culture.

KSRH, the closed circuit dormitory radio station, began its fourth year of broadcasting in the fall. Sponsored by KSUARH, the station broadcasted 78 hours of music, news and public service announcements every week to all non-scholarship dormitories. In order to round out the program schedule and add variety, a controversial issues show entitled "Anything Goes" was added.

With all student radio equipment destroyed by fire, KSDB-FM members use KMAN broadcasting facilities.

Student groups publish four college magazines

Both the creative endeavors of students and news of developments in their colleges were presented through four local publications sponsored by student interest organizations.

Published four times each year by student architects, Crit was distributed to all personnel in the College of Architecture and Design. Recent advances in more efficient agricultural operations were discussed in the Ag Student magazine written by students enrolled in ag journalism.

After screening the original works submitted by students, students in the English department edited Touchstone. Published once each year, the magazine featured poetry, essays, fiction and photography. The K-State Engineer, sponsored by students in the College of Engineering, contained stories about the latest developments in the University's engineering curriculums.

Agriculture judges score in national competition

Dominating intercollegiate judging competition at the American Royal Livestock Show, the Senior Livestock and Senior Meats Judging Teams captured top honors while the senior wool judgers placed second. At the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, senior livestock judgers again placed first. The Junior Livestock Team placed second in competition at the Meat and Animal Evaluation contest in Omaha.

Poultry Judging Team members competed in the National Collegiate Judging contest and the Soil Judging Team competed in the regional contest at Lincoln. Soil judgers also acted as hosts for the National Soils contest in spring, 1968. The Crops Judging Team ranked fifth at both the International and National Collegiate Crops contests. At a contest sponsored in conjunction with the World Food Festival, a member of the Senior Dairy Cattle Team placed second while the team's overall performance ranked sixth.

Academics

Academics are disciplines with barriers that are constantly expanding as man explores and charts the frontiers of his knowledge. To evolve with the intellectual leaders of the time and retain its goal of excellence, the University must master areas as diverse as fingerpainting or microbiology. Assimilation of the old with the new is a sign that a student's education must emphasize the future.

Royal Purple pictures 39 as representative faculty

From a total of 39 faculty members nominated by their college councils on the basis of outstanding teaching performance, a panel of five students and two faculty members have selected 14 of the nominees to represent the many excellent instructors at the University. Student opinion and departmental information were additional criteria used in the final decisions of the Royal Purple staff. Since it is not possible to picture the entire faculty, the staff hopes that recognition of these 14 "representative faculty," pictured with their respective colleges throughout the academics section, will in part compensate.

President McCain earns People-to-People award

For his extensive travels and service, President James A. McCain was awarded the Dwight D. Eisenhower People-to-People Medallion for Outstanding Contributions to International Understanding. McCain also was distinguished as the "Kansan Educator of the Year" by the Topeka Daily Capital. In his address to the Third Annual KSUARH Leadership Conference, McCain stressed the potential of student leadership and later he attended a symposium at Columbia University. He also continued to serve on the Advisory Council to the Import-Export Bank.

Federal and private agencies sponsored $12.5 million of projects undertaken by the University during 1968 with almost $5 million of this allocated for research. Internationally, the University continued to progress in its attempts to establish a land grant institution in India.

Re-elected to a second term as governor, Robert Docking aids the University's development through recommendation of fund requests to the legislature. Docking also picked two new Regents for the state board.

Docking recommends aid to University programs

Government's role in higher education was seen through the actions of Governor Robert Docking and members of the Kansas Legislature.

Governor Docking recommended to the legislature suggestions for financial appropriations proposed by the Board of Regents and also served a ceremonial position by being present at University graduation exercises and appearances by speakers in the Landon lecture series.

Most important of the functions of the legislature, relating to the University, was appropriation of funds. In the 1968 legislature, the Revenue Bond Act was amended to authorize the issuing of bonds for financing of University construction. The granting of a land exchange also aided expansion prospects for the campus facilities.

Board of Regents hears University fund requests

Reviewing requests submitted by administrative officials of the state institutions comprised the primary task of the 10-man Board of Regents. The board then recommended proposals for the governor to present to the legislature. This year, the board considered University requests totaling approximately $30 million. Requested appropriations were designated for a child development lab, a plant science greenhouse and buildings for the education and engineering colleges. Allotment of funds for an accelerated building program also was considered. Other requests heard by the board members included suggestions by President James A. McCain for additional faculty, general salary increases and new academic programs.

Before taking a leave of absence as provost at Ahmadu Bello, Glenn H. Beck, vice president for agriculture, talks with Nigerian students about the country and what he expects to accomplish at the university.

Beck to assume provost duties at Ahmadu Bello

On special assignment of the Rockefeller Foundation, Vice-president for Agriculture Glenn Beck took a leave of absence from the University to become provost for Ahmadu Bello University at Zaria, Nigeria. As the second highest official at the university, one goal of Beck's was to incorporate agricultural extension, veterinary medicine and research into the university's program. Coinciding with his appointment as provost, Beck was named the Rockefeller Foundation's Associate Director of Agricultural Services.

Since 1965, Beck was the top administrator of the University's agricultural teaching, extension, research and foreign agricultural programs. He was president of the University Research Foundation, presided over the National Agricultural Hall of Fame and served as the vice-chairman of the India Council of Universities.

International Agriculture Programs, focusing on the needs of India and Nigeria, came under the direction of Vernon Larson. The new director coordinated the University's efforts to aid India through government funds, despite recent foreign aid cutbacks. In its twelfth year, the program aimed to prevent starvation by teaching the Indian people how to utilize the available land to its fullest capacity. After two years of supervising Andhra Pradesh University, A. D. Weber returned to the University to announce his retirement.

While a civil war raged on throughout the year, University personnel concentrated on expanding the agriculture teaching, research and extension programs at Ahmadu Bello University in northern Nigeria. Plans called for offering degrees in plant, animal and soil sciences by 1972.

After returning from Nigeria, Vernon Larson became Director of the International Agriculture Program.

Extension assists cities with services of faculty

Through the Board of Regent's new program for coordinating extension, Kansas municipalities were offered the services of faculty members at three of the major state universities. The State Industrial Extension and Technical Services Program drew upon the scientific, technological and engineering resources of the state universities to aid business and industry throughout Kansas. Headed by the new acting director Robert Bohannon, the University's Cooperative Extension Service studied rural economic development and river basin and county development programs while assisting numerous urban 4-H clubs. Experts in the fields of public health, water resources, political science, traffic, marketing and transportation joined with faculty to study methods for updating and improving facilities offered by the state.

Before announcing in December his plans to resign as vice-president for academic affairs, John Lott Brown helped in a drive for more library books, aided University for Man and sat on several science councils.

More than 1,000 students gather at a CRAPE rally in the fall to demonstrate for library improvement. The group sought contributions to increase the number of books in Farrell library from 503,000 to 1,500,000.

Brown announces plans to resign University post

After serving as vice-president for academic affairs since 1966, John Lott Brown announced he would assume a teaching and research position with the psychology department at the University of Rochester next fall. As chairman of the Academic Council at the University, Brown worked with the college deans to study methods for formulating the type of education required by today's society. After receiving reports submitted by the directors of campus services, Brown coordinated them with the overall University program in mind. He also continued to conduct his research in the field of visual processes.

Extension classes and off-campus educational projects were coordinated by Norman Harold, new acting director of continuing education, who also acted as information liaison with high schools and junior colleges. After studying results of service, teaching and research, Director of Educational Research Donald Hoyt suggested guides for administrative policies. Computer center activities were supervised by director T. W. Hildebrandt.

Construction to increase Farrell library facilities

As director of Farrell library, Richard Farley oversaw the planning of the $2.5 million library addition on which construction began in December. The new addition will feature a basement study hall, rare books and audio-visual facilities and increased seating capacity. Farley also supervised the hiring and training of the 200 part time and 65 full time library employees.

In October, more than 1,000 students rallied in front of the library to call attention to the inadequacy of the present facilities. Sponsored by the Committee for Renewal of Academic Progress, Etcetera, the walk-out climaxed weeks of intense activity by CRAPE members publicizing the lack of books available in important research areas.

Computer process aids registration procedure

Fall enrollment surged to a record 12,570 students, an increase of 815 over the previous year. Arts and Sciences placed first among the colleges in number of enrollees with 4,733, followed by Agriculture with 1,351. Approximately two per cent of the students who had pre-enrolled in the spring returned to find errors in their schedules; however, modernization of the computer process included distribution of partially completed schedules to students with conflicting classes.

Dean of Admissions and Records Ellsworth Gerritz coordinated enrollment and registration in addition to compiling complete records of scholastic rank and aiding in the transfer of credits from other accredited universities.

Administrative responsibilities of Vice-president for Student Affairs Chester Peters included extensive work in staff and student development programs. Among Peters' areas of supervision were the residence hall programs, intramurals and activities sponsored by the Union.

Assisting the vice-president in his attempt to coordinate the various facets of student life were seven key administrators. Gene Kasper, dean of students, advised the freshman seminar programs and defined University policy regarding student conduct on and off the campus.

Associate Dean of Students Margaret Lahey acted as consultant for AWS and Panhellenic Council. Caroline Peine, assistant dean of students, worked with campus human relations teams and the Dames Club. J. Allen Brettell advised international students and student religious activities were directed by William Tremmel. Under the guidance of director Richard Blackburn, construction began on the second major addition to the K-State Union since its opening in 1956. The new structure was to feature an expanded cafeteria and snack bar, forum hall, arts and crafts shop, bookstore, additional meeting rooms and private dining areas and an interior courtyard topped with a plastic dome. Plans also included the acquisition of 200 extra parking spaces for the campus visitors through conversion of the tennis courts south of the building.

More than 300 students were members of committees supervised by Union Program Council while the faculty, students and alumni comprising the Union Governing Board decided questions of policy. One hundred and ten employees worked in the six service departments of the Union.

Divisions provide service, give students assistance

Because of relocation of troops at Ft. Riley, students returning in the fall faced a housing shortage. Responsible for listings of available off-campus housing, the Housing and Food Services Center also maintained and collected the funds from campus housing units and supervised all dormitory food services. Although the student aid program suffered a slight reduction in federal funds, Aids, Awards and Veterans' Services filled more than 2,500 student requests for aid.

University development coordinates construction

Responsible for the campus construction program, Vice-president for University Development C. Clyde Jones and Assistant Vice-president for University Development Vincent Cool continued to plan for University growth. After the September dedication of the KSU Stadium, attention was focused on construction of the new auditorium, swimming pool, biological sciences building, the Union addition and medical science building.

Selection of the University as the center for a $3.4 million government financed Federal Grain and Marketing Laboratory brought University scientists together with those affiliated with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Other projects included the relocation of the tennis and handball courts, addition of a third floor to the milling building and the erection of a warehouse for the grain science and industry department.

Assisting the vice-presidents in their respective areas were Case Bonebrake, physical plant administrator; H. Dean Hess, executive alumni secretary; and Kenneth Heywood, endowment and development administrator.

University Business Manager Daniel Beatty acts as an adviser to President McCain on the financial affairs of the University. During the year, Beatty arranges and processes appropriations slated for construction.

Business staff regulates University expenditures

Major appropriations made through the office of University Business Manager Daniel Beatty included funds for a $3 million auditorium, a $3.6 million biological sciences building and a $2.5 million addition to Farrell library, all to be completed by late 1970. Distributing funds in accordance with state and federal laws was one aspect of the business manager's responsibility for the fiscal operation and policy of the University. Beatty also periodically reported to President McCain and acted as the University's representative with administrators of state fiscal offices.

Hess launches exchange with regional ag colleges

Reciprocal agreements involving the exchange of students in agriculture between the University and schools in neighboring states were finalized by dean of Agriculture Carroll Hess. Through this arrangement, out-of-state residents were permitted to enroll in the college's academic program while University students travelled to other schools. The dean also supervised the college's self-study program and assisted in the publishing of the program's recommendations in January.

In his third year as dean, Hess was appointed vice-chairman of the National Association of Deans and Directors of Resident Instruction in Colleges of Agriculture. He also chaired several national committees on ag education and was a member of the National Academy of Science and the National Research Committee.

Ag college relaxes stipulations, expands courses

By reducing emphasis on agricultural specialization, the College of Agriculture permitted its students to take more courses in communications and the social sciences. New in the college curriculum was an option designed to prepare students for future work in economic development and personnel management in agriculture and related fields. The faculty also unanimously approved a proposal for instruction and class evaluation.

Broadening of the research and extension programs brought additional support to off-farm agribusinesses, youth leadership and family development. These programs aided in natural resource and community economic development. Recording an enrollment of 1340 students, the college showed the largest percentage increase among all colleges in the University. Despite an 86 per cent increase during the past five years, professional demand for agriculture students continued to outweigh the number of graduates.

Curriculum self-studies strengthen Ag programs

Several recommendations for improving the College of Agriculture's academic programs resulted from the college's extensive self-study. The suggestion to reduce the number of credit hours required to obtain a B.S. received approval of the faculty after the findings were published. Advisers were encouraged to utilize more of their students' electives for courses in communications, computer science, math and statistics. A flexible biological and physical science curriculum was formed to meet the varying needs of students pursuing one of the college's four option areas.

In the interest of offering students more leeway in developing their academic programs, the major-minor system was considered. This would allow students to select a secondary area of study from another field or college curriculum.

College of Architecture ranks in nations' top ten

Because of the demand for architecture graduates, the College of Architecture and Design became one of the fastest growing colleges on campus. For each 1969 graduate, jobs were available with large corporations, small firms and government organizations. Ranked among the 10 largest architecture colleges in the country, the college offered students the chance to work together in solving problems common to their fields.

Highlighting the year were two field trips, to San Francisco and Chicago, which permitted students to view outstanding works of architecture. The curriculum in landscape architecture received a five-year accreditation from the American Society of Landscape Architects and Charles Almack, an architecture senior, received the William R. Frampton Memorial Prize for his design of the symbol which will be used for the 1975 United States Bicentennial World Exposition.

Fischer promotes advisory board for architecture

Aided by his associates, Dean of the College of Architecture and Design Emil Fischer departmentalized the college into the divisions of Architecture, Landscape Architecture, Interior Design and Planning. This plan resulted in a decentralization of responsibility among personnel in the college. Representing the University, Fischer attended the 1968 commencement exercises at Andhra Pradesh University in Hyderabad, India.

An advisory board comprised of outstanding professional architects from across the nation was established by Fischer to insure that faculty training was keeping pace with trends becoming apparent in the professional world. The seven-man board met periodically with the college faculty and 700 students to discuss programs which could be implemented into the curriculum of the College of Architecture and Design.

A & S reviews produce course program changes

After a review of its curriculum, the College of Arts and Sciences liberalized its program of course requirements for its 4,724 students. Implementation of the new program was designed to allow a greater selection of courses for students striving for A.B. and B.S. degrees. Course revision initiated by Dean John Chalmers resulted in a strengthening of several departments in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Encouraged by the dean, students, faculty and administrators collaborated to bring about needed changes in the college curriculum. In addition to teaching a course, Chalmers also supervised program developments and evaluations.

With Associate Dean William Stamey, Chalmers conducted reviews of the music, history, physical education, political science and sociology departments. Efforts included talking with students and faculty, then reporting their findings to department heads. As program adviser, Assistant Dean Orval Ebberts maintained student records and Assistant Dean Marjorie Adams supervised the honors program and curriculum study.

In an effort to unify and strengthen the honors program, honors students were grouped in the renovated Van Zile hall. The dorm functioned as a gathering place, in addition to providing the setting for several classes and meetings for the Honors Council. The Intercollegiate Honors Council provided students with the opportunity to introduce changes into the program's structure.

Honors students aided each other both academically and socially and eased adjustment to university life for freshmen in the program. Courses ranged from an advanced English class to the Southeast Asia Center's seminar on yoga. An interdisciplinary course combining political science, sociology and western civilization was offered as was a junior colloquium which focused on various aspects of the topic "aggression."

Commerce initiates new programs of specialization

College of Commerce faculty conducted an overall review of the complete undergraduate curriculum which resulted in changes in the fields of specialized study available to students. The field of Personnel was dropped and incorporated into the field of Management. International Business Administration was added and, with the increased usage of the computer in today's business world, a course in computer study was made mandatory for all students entering the commerce program.

Recording a six and one-half per cent increase in student enrollment over last year, the College of Commerce strived to structure new courses which would fit more closely with the demands made on today's graduate in the business world. The college also worked to encourage high school and junior college students to enter business administration and other areas in the commerce field.

Lynn reviews courses, plans masters curriculum

In his first year as dean of the College of Commerce, Robert Lynn aimed toward expansion of the business program and formulation of new college policies. While working to establish a master's degree program in business administration, Lynn made an overall review of the commerce program with the purpose of forming more courses geared for both graduates and undergraduates. The effectiveness of the college's large lecture sessions also was studied by the new dean.

Previously the resident director of the graduate program in business administration at Whiteman Air Force Base, Lynn supervised an off-campus educational program in connection with the University of Missouri. Author of three books, the dean worked on revising his economics textbook and taught an introductory business course.

Education students effect study of college program

Student involvement highlighted the year in the College of Education. After combining efforts to form an evaluation committee, students and faculty undertook a study of the goals of undergraduate students in education and future programs which the college could offer to help its students attain them. Another development involved 46 students who were afforded an opportunity to act as teacher aides in the Manhattan school system. The volunteers worked approximately 10 hours per week assisting teachers in the various levels of education around the local area.

Plans were initiated for the establishment of a student teaching program in the inner city schools in Kansas. Cities to be included were Kansas City, Wichita and Topeka. Purpose of the program was to introduce potential teachers to the types of problems which could be encountered when teaching students in the ghetto schools.

Education dean strives to strengthen curriculum

In his second year as dean of Education, James McComas worked on plans for strengthening the college curriculum. Of particular concern to McComas was the recruitment of additional faculty for research and special education. In correlation to his position as chairman of a state-wide committee on health education, the dean acted as adviser for the State Department of Education. In this capacity he collaborated with state health officials to determine methods of improving health education programs in public schools.

Another area in which McComas was involved during the year was educational research. The dean served as a trustee of the Mid-Continent Regional Educational Laboratory, a facility in Kansas City which disseminated its findings to numerous educational institutions scattered throughout the midwestern United States.

Grants influence outlook of engineering research

Research in the College of Engineering expanded when grants received tripled amounts of previous years. Project Themis was renewed and its scope broadened to include nuclear engineering and physics. New equipment available to engineering personnel included a 600,000-volt Cockcroft-Walton accelerator for manufacturing semiconductor devices with generated ions.

Renovation of the curriculum resulted in a more standardized program coupled with a reduction in the number of required courses. With the initiation of a doctorate program in the Department of Industrial Engineering, a total of six Ph.D. degrees were offered by the college. To integrate the engineering disciplines, the Engineering Council strived to involve more students in college activities. This included distribution of a student questionnaire designed to aid the council in selecting outstanding faculty to receive recognition for excellence in teaching.

Nevins considers innovative educational methods

At the request of Ralph Nevins, dean of the College of Engineering, student representatives sat on college curriculum committees and participated in the Engineering Faculty Retreat which concentrated on the planning of long-range goals for the college. As Vice-president Sections West in the American Society for Engineering Education, Nevins studied advances in engineering education and attempted to implement many of the newer methods into the college program.

In addition to administrative duties, Nevins served as secretary of the Joint Committee on Engineering in Medicine and Biology and was appointed a member of the Engineering Education Accredidation Committee of the Engineering Council for Professional Development.

Home economics initiates student-faculty seminar

On the basis of undergraduate enrollment, the College of Home Economics ranked as the third largest college on campus. The initiation of the first Student-Faculty Seminar represented a step forward for both students and faculty in the college. At the seminar, both graduate and undergraduate students delivered researched reports on student views of responsibility, the advisory system, courses and curriculums, orientation procedures and the graduate study programs offered by the college. Faculty responded with additional papers and a panel discussion.

At the recommendation of the seminar, students were appointed as voting members to three standing committees in the college. Another product of the discussions was the development of a new Student-Faculty Affairs Committee which was comprised of seven students elected at-large from the college and seven members of the faculty selected by department colleagues.

Vet Med launches seven-step plan for expansion

Purchase of the 80 acres north of the dairy plant fulfilled one of the preliminaries necessary to the College of Veterinary Medicine's seven-step master plan for expansion. Major changes in the teaching of laboratories included the installation of a closed-circuit television system in Burt hall. This allowed for the use of the amphitheatre as a multi-discipline dry lab. Enlargement of laboratory classrooms ended the former need for splitting freshman and sophomore classes.

Federal and private research grants, which more than doubled last year's allocations, aided in financing construction of three new labs. Two new departments were established and two others consolidated after the Board of Regents approved the action. College faculty continued to aid in the development of the Ahmadu Bello University, created in 1963, as the regional veterinary medical school for all of the English speaking countries in the western part of Africa.

Recruitment of outstanding faculty for the College of Veterinary Medicine was one of the major goals of Dean Charles Cornelius. He also headed planning of the proposed veterinary medicine campus, a $14 million building complex to be built during the next eight years. A member of the American Gastroenterology Association and the National Institutes of Health Advisory Commission, Cornelius continued researching the metabolic liver functions of man and animals.

On his second executive visit to Ahmadu Bello University in Nigeria, Cornelius participated in the advisory and curriculum planning programs at the veterinary college. While in Europe, the dean presented a series of seminars at the Royal Free Hospital in London and was the guest consultant to the hospital's liver function unit.

Grad School enrollment swells to 1,550 students

Enrollment in the Graduate School grew to 1,550 students despite concern of students and administrators last year when new provisions affecting the deferment of graduate students were implemented into the Selective Service Act. Newly approved doctorate study programs went into effect in education and industrial engineering. In science, exploratory studies were established in environment and ecology. Although federal support had been curtailed, research moved forward after $9 million in grants were awarded to the University by outside sources.

In order to meet current developments, the school aimed toward flexibility and decentralization in its program. New groupings of the graduate faculty produced increased interaction among departments offering graduate courses. At an October forum, seniors were advised on procedures for applying to a graduate school.

Kruh also was credited with extensive publications regarding his findings in the field of structural chemistry.

After helping to establish a new Graduate Student Council, comprised of 16 students from the areas of humanities, social sciences, biological sciences and physical science, the dean directed the council's attempts to solve academic problems encountered in the Graduate School program and to consider new policies for the school.

Coordinating action for common goals, SGA President Bob Morrow meets with other Kansas student leaders.

Morrow, SGA encourage more student involvement

Led by Student Body President Bob Morrow, Student Governing Association this year embarked on a new course of action. Students were encouraged to become involved with programs designed to upgrade the quality of education offered at the University. SGA also assumed a more active role in government affairs and made arrangements for more effective student representation on campus decision making committees.

Sponsored by SGA, the first Black Awareness Week was organized to emphasize Negro culture in America. As part of SGA's continuing program of establishing dialogues between ethnic groups, the Human Relations Committee scheduled activities where students of varied cultural and racial backgrounds could exchange ideas.

Student committees aim to evaluate proposed bills

Evaluating proposed Student Governing Association legislation was the foremost task of the SGA executive committee. During the year, committee members considered the appropriate action to be taken on items including teacher evaluation and rating, educational innovations, the incorporation of student government and a bill outlining the rights and responsibilities of students at the University. Members also studied the possibility of purchasing an air-inflatable classroom for use in the University for Man program.

Presidents of the nine college councils and the student body president worked through the President's Council to keep the individual colleges informed of pertinent SGA legislation.

Singers tour in Far East; Glee clubs visit schools

While entertaining Army, Navy and Air Force personnel stationed in the Orient, members of the K-State Singers earned semester credit in the study of music of the Far East. In addition to their fifth USO tour, the group performed at 50 concerts in Kansas and neighboring states.

Varsity Men's Glee Club teamed up with the University of Nebraska group to perform in a concert in Lincoln, Neb. Members performed at three campus concerts and entertained high school and alumni groups scheduled on the club's tour of the southwestern areas of Kansas.

After staging a concert at the University, the Women's Glee Club embarked on their annual statewide tour of Kansas high schools and junior colleges. In the spring, the 47 coed members of the group performed in the Choral Union's presentation of the "Poulenc Gloria."

Music groups perform in concerts, make state tours

Trips, tours and concerts highlighted the year for University Choir and Madrigals.

University Choir received an invitation to sing at the National Choral Directors Association Regional meeting in St. Louis. The group was selected after taped auditions were sent. Choir members participated in a statewide tour, singing for high schools and alumni. The 55-member group also presented two fund-raising concerts.

Madrigals increased from 16 to 20 members, after adding one singer to each of the four major voice parts. Candy bars were sold to finance a trip to California with Varsity Men's Glee Club, but due to bad weather the trip was cancelled.

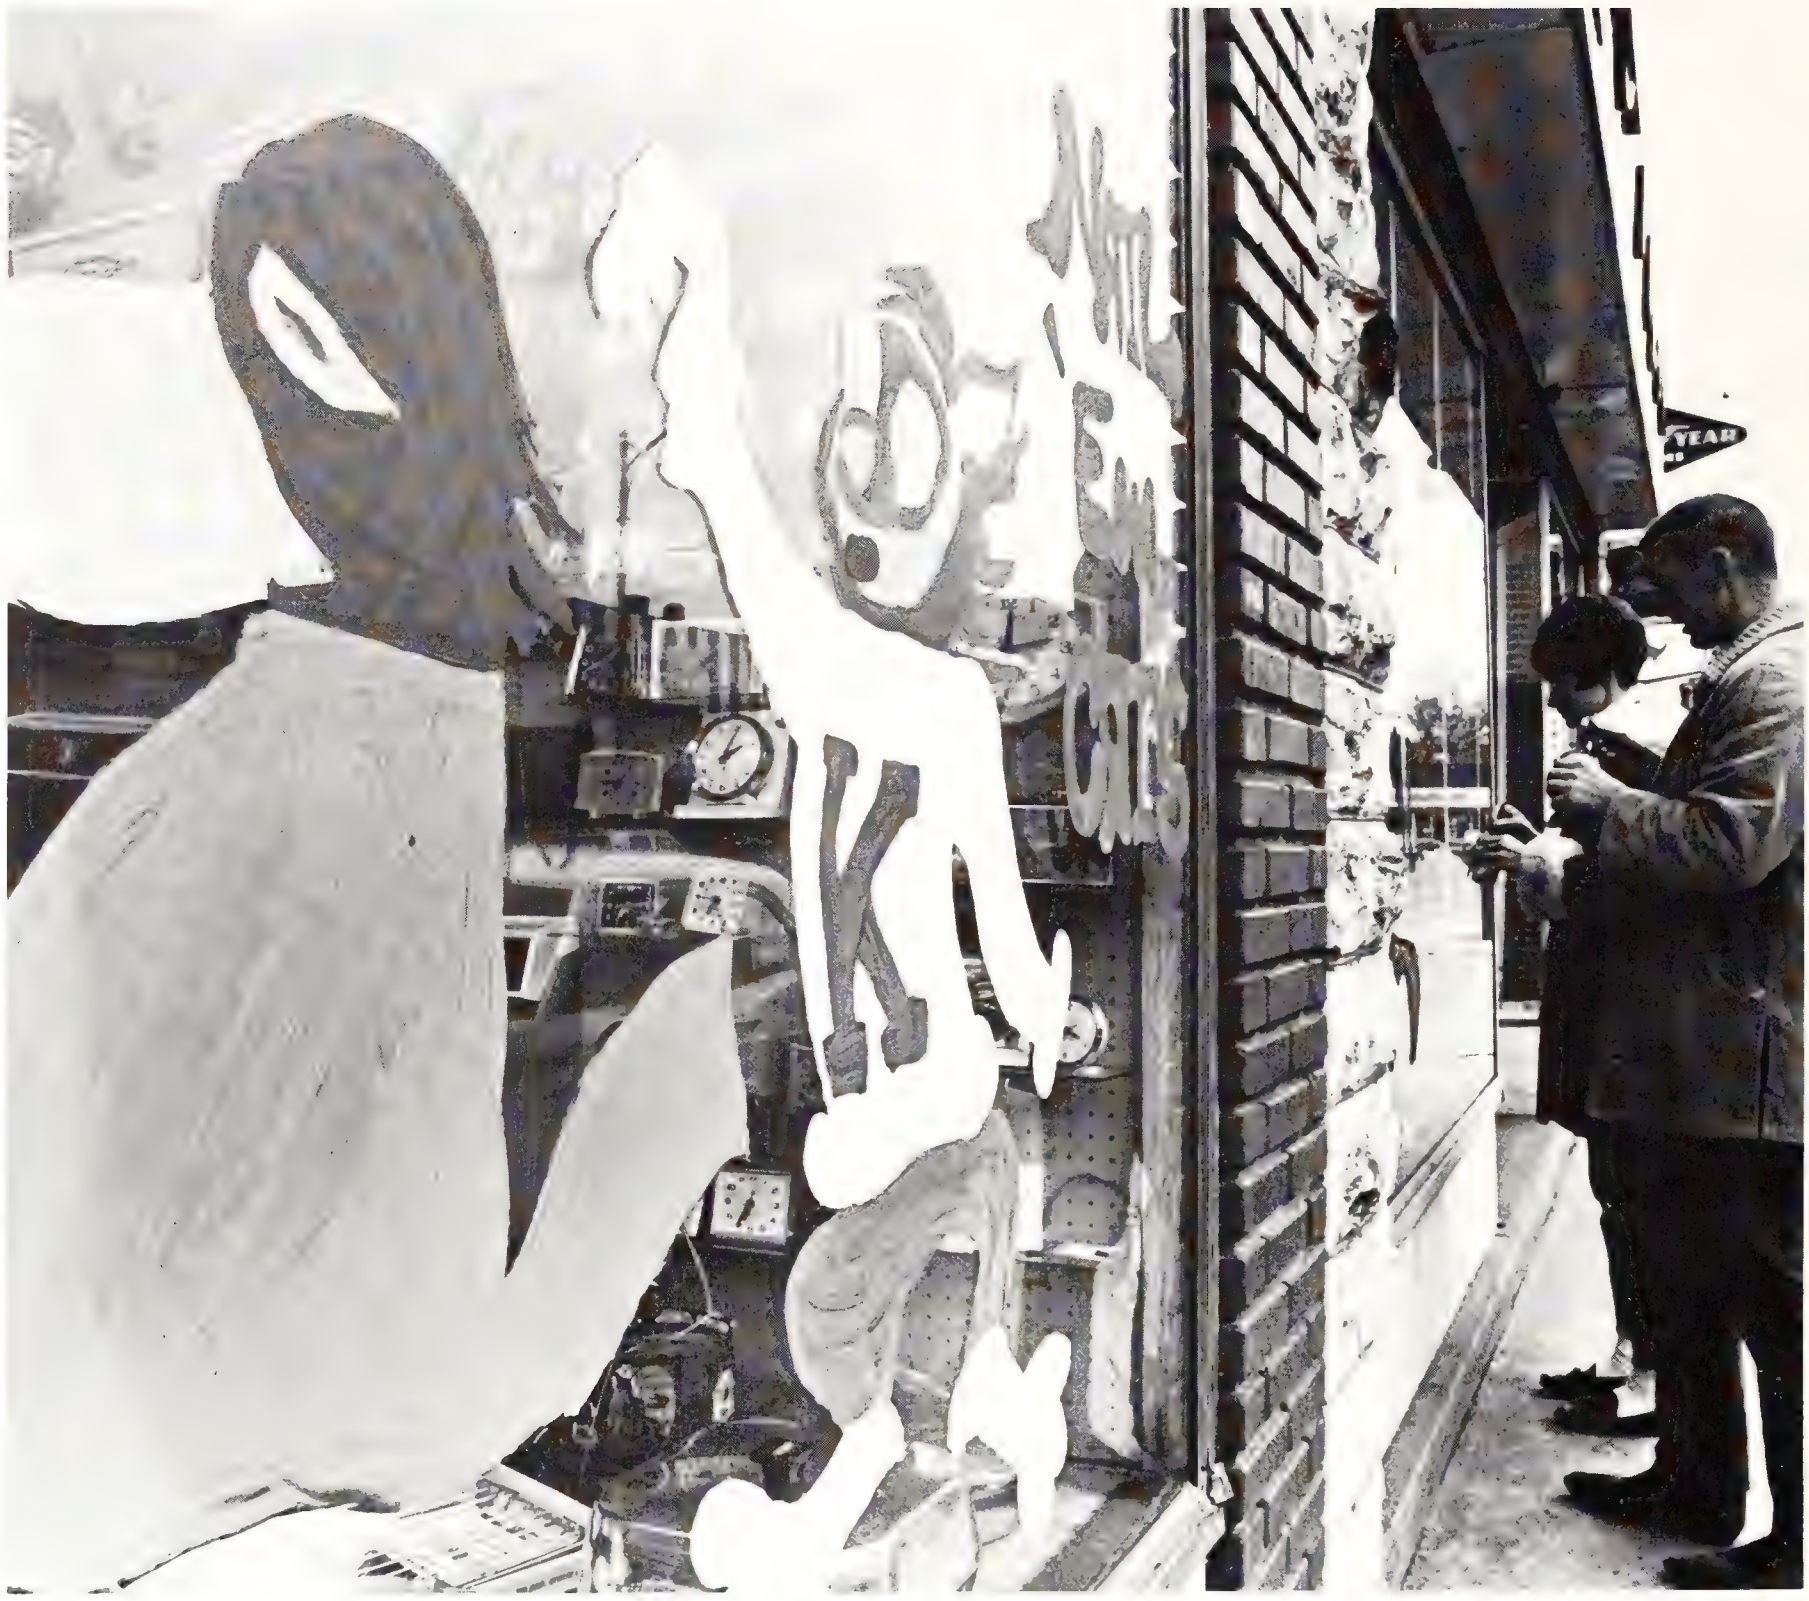
Students derive benefits as organization members

Although each campus organization has a unique purpose, similarities among the groups can be found. All attempt to maintain a certain set of standards for their clubs and all provide their members with personal benefits derived from working together with other students.

Whatever the individual interest or need, some group at the University exists to fulfill it. In the following pages, the goals and accomplishments of campus organizations are recounted. For convenience, they have been grouped under the following classifications: honorary, professional, academic, military, religious, auxiliary, service, ethnic, athletic and special interest groups.

Special instruction to strengthen proficiency in exhibitions highlight activities of the Judo Club.



To encourage student enthusiasm for Homecoming, Blue Key and Mortar Board members decorate store windows. The groups also arranged Homecoming Previews, sold mums and organized pre-game activities.

Honoraries sponsor Homecoming, Parents' Day

Honoraries gave special recognition to those students who displayed outstanding educational achievements and leadership.

At a spring retreat sponsored by Blue Key, students discussed crucial University issues and the role of the University in student life. The senior men also undertook arrangements for Homecoming Previews, the election of the Homecoming Queen and the pre-game bonfire.

Senior women in Mortar Board sought to aid potential graduate students by compiling and printing a booklet designed to answer the questions of seniors considering furthering their education. As part of this project, a semester forum was featured. Money-raising endeavors of the group included selling mums for the Homecoming game and school calendars noting major University events scheduled during the year.

In an effort to further the work of the Human Relations teams, Chimes, junior womens' honorary, sponsored an Easter party for the children of international students at the University. The coeds also planned and presented all the Parents' Day activities including the pre-game luncheon.

Honoraries seek students of scholastic excellence

Academic excellence of students was rewarded with invitations for membership in University honorary organizations.

Two hundred University students, faculty and alumni comprised the local chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national honorary. Juniors elected into the group ranked in the upper five per cent of their class while seniors and graduate students were required to be in the upper 10 per cent of their divisions. New members were initiated in January and at the annual chapter banquet in May.

Spurs, sophomore women's service honorary, selected 34 new members from those freshmen with a 2.5 grade average for their first semester of work at the University. Granted a charter in the fall, the women aided coeds moving into residence halls in September and worked in the AWS Convention and for Project Concern.

In the fall, members of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman men's scholastic honorary, helped to orient new students to campus life. After initiating new members, the group staged a banquet in conjunction with Alpha Lambda Delta.

Honorary starts program to aid incoming students

Scholastic honoraries provided recognition to students who had demonstrated outstanding achievements in individual scholarship.

Putnam Scholars discussed means for increasing stimulation in classes at a panel discussion with members of the English and philosophy departments. At their annual banquet, the recipients of Henry J. Putnam Scholarships heard an address by President McCain.

During the year, women of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, constructed and distributed posters announcing University convocations and offered a course preference file for new students. The coeds also sponsored tours in the fall designed to acquaint incoming students with the facilities in Farrell library.

Ag honoraries mill flour, listen to industry talks

Through projects sponsored by agriculture students, the College of Agriculture was represented in both the community and University.

For their annual Christmas project, members of Alpha Mu, milling honorary, contributed sacks of milled flour for the food baskets prepared by the local Elks Club for needy families in the Manhattan area. At meetings, representatives of the industry spoke to the bakery management, food science and milling students.

At their convocation for agriculture students, members of Alpha Zeta, agriculture and veterinary medicine honorary, featured an outstanding agriculture businessman as guest speaker. Members contacted alumni for the purpose of soliciting additional funds for scholarships.

Engineering groups gain practical career training

Activities sponsored by engineering and chemistry interest groups provided practical training experiences for students preparing for careers in one of the related professional fields.

American Institute of Chemical Engineers distributed information about their field and prepared exhibits of experimental projects which were displayed during Open House. Members also planned a spring picnic and purchased an electric coffee maker for the department.

Through a summer training program and inspection trips organized by Associated General Contractors, students were given the opportunity to study actual problems encountered in various stages of building. Meetings featured speakers from the construction industry.

With the setting of the concrete, the American Society of Landscape Architects finished the Quinlan Gardens project located between the home management houses and Petticoat Lane. During the year, speakers and field trips acquainted members with opportunities available to graduates in the landscape architecture field.

Chemistry students in the American Chemical Society visited the Midwest Research Institute and the Food and Drug Administration in Kansas City during the year on field trips arranged by their organization. The group also was responsible for keeping chemistry students informed of job opportunities available in U.S. companies.

Professionals, colleges stress communications

Honorary and professional groups cooperated with their colleges to aid new students and to increase student-faculty communications.

Financed by members' dues and the Endowment Association, Tau Sigma Delta awarded a scholarship to a freshman in the College of Architecture and Design. The honorary invited speakers to discuss jobs in architecture and, as a service project, inventoried the college library.

Steel Ring began the year's activities by participating in the all-university junior college day in the fall. During the year, the engineering honorary promoted official liaisons between the college and the students. The seniors also comprised the central steering committee for Open House.

Rebuilding ghetto areas in Manhattan was a major concern of members of the student chapter of the American Institute of Architects. In addition to drawing designs for the renovations, members performed the necessary construction work. The group also published CRIT, a bi-monthly newsletter geared towards the interests of personnel in architecture and design.

Engineers win national award, plan Open House

Field trips sponsored by engineering organizations helped acquaint students with the types of jobs available upon graduation.

Members of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers organized and sponsored Engineering Open House, attended the regional meeting in Missouri and contributed to the building fund of the parent organization. Discussions at meetings often focused on recent developments in the agricultural engineering profession.

After receiving the Certificate of Commendation from the national headquarters for 11 of the past 12 years, the local chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers was named the number one student chapter in the nation. Members attended joint meetings with sections of ASCE in Lawrence and Kansas City and also toured the Kansas City Structural Steel Company.

Outstanding students in the upper one-third of the civil engineering class were eligible for membership in Chi Epsilon honorary. Service projects performed by the 26 members during the year included working during registration and hosting periodical department conferences.

Student engineers study employment opportunity

Student members of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers and Eta Kapp Nu toured potential employment areas and participated in Engineering Open House.

Members of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers visited the Boeing Company in Wichita to explore the company's organizational structure and jobs available to engineering graduates. Plans for two such tours each year were formed. Outside speakers periodically attended the group's regular meetings.

Eta Kappa Nu officers acted as chairmen of electrical engineering displays in Open House. Initiation activities for new members of the electrical engineering honorary included a smoker, pledge week and a banquet.

Membership campaigns build engineering clubs

In national competition, the local American Institute of Industrial Engineers ranked as the year's best student chapter. Members attended the regional conference in April and annual awards banquet in May. At the banquet, recognition was given to students for outstanding service to the organization and officers were installed.

In addition to sponsoring a booth at the Engineers' and Architects' Open House, students in the Society of American Military Engineers competed in a national membership contest with other student posts. Members also toured the Kansas City district of the Corps of Engineers projects.

Pi Tau Sigma reviews for training examination

Attainment of personal and professional development in mechanical engineering was a prime objective of both Pi Tau Sigma and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Students preparing to write the engineering-in-training test were aided by review sessions sponsored by Pi Tau Sigma, mechanical engineering honorary. Recognition by the group went to the outstanding freshman in the mechanical engineering curriculum. For Engineering Open House, members built a departmental display.

Proctor and Gamble awarded an outstanding student member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers a grant to attend the national meeting in New York City.

Nuclear society provides professional exchanges

Students in nuclear engineering, who were in good academic standing in the College of Engineering, were granted membership in either the American Nuclear Society or Sigma Tau.

Speakers from governmental and industrial agencies exchanged ideas with engineering students at monthly meetings of the American Nuclear Society. Members also played active roles in staging Engineering Open House and a traditional senior banquet. In its eighth year, the organization promoted interest in nuclear engineering.

As part of their service to the University, members and pledges of Sigma Tau, engineering honorary, repainted the letters on K-hill, cleaned the pyramid between Seaton hall and the Union and participated in Open House.

Journalists win awards, plan radio-tv convention

Coeds with high scholastic achievements in the area of medical technology received invitations of membership in Alpha Delta Theta. Guest speakers from hospitals attended meetings to discuss opportunities for women who enter the field of medical technology. Research and medical centers were explored by the coeds on field trips to Kansas City and Irwin Army Hospital.

Coed journalists participated in projects sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism society. After receiving recognition as one of the top 13 student chapters in the nation at the national convention, Theta Sigma Phi sponsored its annual publicity clinic in the fall and began work to form an alumni chapter in Manhattan. Women in various phases of journalism were guests at the annual Matrix banquet.

Radio and television students in Alpha Epsilon Rho hosted the Region V Convention and published the regional newsletter. Each month, an outstanding student was recognized by the honorary for his work on KSDB-FM, the student radio station. Various phases of broadcasting management were observed on a Nebraska field trip.

Students interested in reporting news about agricultural developments joined the Agriculture Communications Club. Members built a display for Ag Science Day, featured journalism speakers at group meetings and sponsored field trips to Kansas City business establishments.

In the national Sigma Delta Chi college press contest, the local chapter's entry placed second in the feature story division. During the year, the chapter president worked on a committee from Region VIII which selected the recipient of the Past President of Sigma Delta Chi Award.

Spanish, music societies stimulate student interest

Two honoraries, Sigma Delta Pi and Mu Phi Epsilon, worked during the year to stimulate interest in Hispanic and musical events.

To better club relations with other campus groups, Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honorary, scheduled joint meetings with the Latin American Association. Members, who were required to maintain a 3.0 average in Spanish, also participated in caroling at the Feast of Nations.

Members of Mu Phi Epsilon, international professional music sorority, featured two music recitals during the year. In conjunction with Phi Mu Alpha, the women co-sponsored the annual December Feast of Carols. Members were music majors with a 3.0 grade average in music.

Fine arts honor students seek department status

Students of fine arts worked to establish a new drama fraternity and travelled to other cities to visit prominent art galleries.

Gamma chapter of Theta Alpha Pi, drama honorary, which received its charter in November, undertook an experimental "Reader's Theatre" that featured plays written by students and faculty. The group also initiated a drive to form chapters at other Kansas universities.

Fund raising endeavors of Delta Phi Delta, art honorary, included a Paint-In and the annual Art Mart. Members toured art institutes in Nebraska and Chicago, hosted a costume party and promoted the establishment of a Fine Arts department.

Phys Ed society donates victory bell for stadium

Phi Epsilon Kappa and Phi Epsilon Delta, physical education honoraries, coordinated athletic, social and service activities.

Installation of the victory bell at KSU Stadium was undertaken by the men of Phi Epsilon Kappa. Members also maintained a coat check at home basketball games, assisted with the punt, pass and kick contest sponsored by Ford Motor Company and aided in the city's free throw contest. Convention trips and writing articles for professional newsletters were additional projects.

Phi Epsilon Delta, women's honorary, scheduled speakers for its monthly meetings and entertained children from underprivileged homes in Manhattan at a Christmas party.

Geologists explore mines during spring field trip

Outstanding students in geography and geology were awarded membership in Gamma Theta Upsilon or Sigma Gamma Epsilon.

Weekly seminars featuring departmental speakers were initiated by Gamma Theta Upsilon, geography honorary. Guest lecturers included the geographer from the State Department. At the national convention in Kansas City, a member received the National Society of Geographic Education Award for overall excellence.

Sigma Gamma Epsilon organized a four-day spring field trip to explore the Tri-State mining district in Missouri. Seminars featured outside speakers and University faculty. Members also supplied students with geologic equipment.

Organizations examine commerce developments

Through lectures and seminars, commerce students in Phi Chi Theta, Alpha Kappa Psi and Omicron Delta Epsilon learned of current trends emerging in the modern business world.

Tours of General Motors and Armco Steel in Kansas City introduced Phi Chi Theta coeds to the inside workings of large corporations. A group promoting business education for women, Phi Chi Theta sponsored a discussion on fashion and a report on the New Orleans biennial meeting at organization meetings during the year.

Alpha Kappa Psi, honorary commerce fraternity, maintained the reading room in Calvin hall, sponsored a management seminar in the spring and organized a faculty-student luncheon. Members were required to have a 2.2 grade average.

Outstanding graduate students in economics received recognition in a bulletin board display prepared by the members of Omicron Delta Epsilon, economics honorary. At monthly professional meetings, graduate students presented summaries of their theses and discussed current economic problems facing the United States.

Education organizations host high school groups

Prompting high school students to further their education was a primary aim of Alpha Tau Alpha and the Student Education Association.

At a program sponsored by Alpha Tau Alpha, agricultural education honororary, students and their parents learned of job opportunities in the agricultural education field. Members ushered at the Little American Royal and at the Future Farmers of America Convention.

Small discussion groups were formed by members of SEA for the purpose of considering recent developments in the area of education. Organization projects included hosting the state SEA Convention and freshman orientation. Senior high school students were invited to campus in the spring for a tour of the University.

Phi Upsilon Omicron celebrates centennial year

Decorating public buildings in Manhattan aided in raising funds for the American Institute of Interior Design. Field trips took members to Chicago in the spring and later to Kansas City where members attended meetings of professional interior designers. The group also participated in a symposium which featured professional lecturers and a collegiate interior design contest.

Celebration of Founder's Day marked the 100th anniversary of Phi Upsilon Omicron, home economics honorary. To encourage scholarship among new students in the college, the group presented an award to the outstanding freshman in the home economics program. Social events of the organization included the annual fall picnic and an international exchange dinner.

Sophomore honor students in home economics were recognized in a bulletin board display maintained by Omicron Nu, home economics honorary. Projects of the organization included a complete revision of the chapter handbook and visiting classes for the purpose of familiarizing home ec students with the organization's purpose and requirements for membership.

Veterinary association coordinates Open House

Veterinary Medicine Open House and several social events highlighted the year for students preparing for careers in veterinary medicine.

Coordinators of the departmental Open House in October, members of the American Veterinary Medical Association executed a textbook exchange with Ecuador. The chapter placed first in intramural football and wrestling and also sponsored two banquets and a dance in the spring.

Representatives of the 300 members of the Pre-Veterinary Club manned an information booth at the Union Activities Carnival and built a display for Veterinary Medicine Open House. Meetings often focused on suggestions for increasing communications between pre-vet students and the College of Veterinary Medicine.

Club projects grant job experience for ag majors

Representatives of their respective industries presented descriptions of job opportunities at the meetings of the Wildlife Society, Bakery Management Club and Dairy Science Club.

By working at deer check stations in the fall, members of the Wildlife Society gained experience in their field and raised funds for their group. Habitats of the deer, antelope and turkey were explored in a booklet published and distributed by the organization. Members attended the Wildlife Bowl and regional conferences.

Partially through the efforts of members of the Bakery Management Club, students in bakery management were afforded three areas of specialization. At monthly meetings, a speaker from one of the areas discussed opportunities in his field.

Members of the Dairy Science Club co-sponsored the Little American Royal and chose the finalists in the Miss Agriculture contest. Departmental activities were presented in the club's annual yearbook. Members also sponsored a chili supper, fall steak fry and Christmas cheese sales.

Featuring dairy products made by the dairy science students, the Dairy Bar attracts customers from all areas of campus. Gift packages of various types of cheese were added to sales at Christmas.

Clubs encourage agriculture-related activities

Agriculture students promoted their respective fields of study by presenting displays and booths for the annual Ag Science Day.

Associated with the Student Activities Subdivision of the American Society of Agronomy, the Wheat State Agronomy Club participated in speech and essay contests and sent three representatives to the national convention in New Orleans. Members hosted a fall party for students and faculty in the agronomy department and also sponsored a picnic in the spring.

Displays built by Entomology Club members for Ag Science Day centered on plant resistance to animal feeding and included an example of equipment used in classroom teaching. Presentation of an award to the top individual in the state Future Farmers of America contest and a Christmas party rounded out the year's activities for club members, all entomology majors.

Income from pecan sales in the fall and bedding plant sales in the spring financed a scholarship awarded to an outstanding member of the Horticulture Club. The group also sponsored a flower judging team which took field trips to view horticulture sites and participated in Open House and Ag Science Day activities.

Escorting businessmen attending the Kansas Formula Feed Conference around campus was a service project undertaken by members of the Grain Science Club. Department speakers kept members informed of the types of courses needed by today's grain science graduate.

In a class session, entomology students examine specimens under a high-powered microscope. The students practiced skills in Entomology Club projects, including displaying equipment at Ag Science Day.

Block and Bridle adds horse show to schedule

Promoting higher scholarship and the animal science industry, the National Block and Bridle Club, with the Dairy Club, co-sponsored the Little American Royal. The club initiated the first Kansas State Horse Show in February and also had members who participated in the livestock, meats and wool student judging contests.

In conjunction with the ag mechanization students at the University of Missouri, the local Agricultural Mechanization Club sponsored an information booth at the annual Western Farm Retailer Convention in Kansas City. Working with simi- and Missouri, the group worked toward creating a national Agricultural Mechanization Club.

In a department contest, members of the Agricultural Economics Club competed in debate and speech. Winners competed nationally at the annual meeting of the American Farm Economics Association. Relaying agricultural information to the public, the club participated in the annual Ag Science Day. Members also were active in the University's intramural program.

Completing the flag race competition ride, a contestant scores points in the Block and Bridle show.

Preparing for their future careers, members of the Home Economics Teaching Club discuss certification, curriculum and other phases of teaching with guest speakers at their regularly scheduled club meetings.

Groups promote teaching, aid in college projects

Two clubs, Agricultural Education Club and Home Economics Teaching Interest Group, provided professional activities for students.

Agricultural Education Club, which was open to curriculum majors, prepared a display for Ag Science Day and organized a book exchange for agriculture students. At the annual banquet, the 70-member club honored outstanding students and awarded a scholarship. Members also helped to plan Ag Festival during the fall semester.

Combining faculty and student membership, the home ec teaching group met regularly for guest talks by faculty members Richard Owens, Helen Brockman and James Akin. The club participated in Hospitality Day, the Home Ec Christmas Tea and an Easter service project.

Home Economics students build public relations

Coinciding with their sponsorship of the Best Dressed Girl contest, members of the Clothing and Textiles Club organized a grooming program presented in the spring. Other projects of the coeds included writing letters to high school seniors informing them of the University's program in home economics and hostessing a picnic for all new members of the organization.

In addition to keeping members posted on job opportunities open to them in the areas of foods and nutrition, the Professional Foods Club organized field trips to other institutions for the purpose of touring the food service facilities. The 39 members were among those invited to attend the home economics annual Christmas tea.

Field trips took the 50 members of the Microbiology Journal Club to the Veterans' Hospital and Upjohn Industry in Kansas City and to the American Society of Microbiology meeting at Norman, Okla. Committees formed within the group considered revision of the undergraduate curriculum in biology and the possibility of compiling a booklet on graduate schools. Research developments were discussed by speakers at monthly meetings and in a bi-annual newsletter distributed by the club to microbiology majors.

Activities of members of the University Extension Club included presenting periodical radio programs, staging a Christmas tree decorating party, acting as judges at county 4-H days and constructing a display in connection with Ag Science Day activities in the spring.

Working on stories during their reporting lab, home economics journalism majors receive advice from the instructor. Special courses are designed to give the needed skills to write about the home ec areas.

Home Economics clubs tour professional facilities

Experimentation with ways to improve the study room in Justin hall was the major activity of the Home Economics Design Interest Group. In order to keep abreast of the role and function of contemporary design, during the year members toured a garment factory, heard speakers and attended fashion and design demonstrations.

On a field trip to Topeka, the Home Economics Journalism Club toured television, public relations and newspaper offices. Members wrote letters to prospective home economics majors and assisted with college publications. Plans were formulated to publish a cookbook using recipes donated by campus living groups.

Sponsoring a consumer credit field trip, the Home Economics Family Economics Interest Group toured a Kansas City credit bureau and the credit departments of a retail store, bank and small loan company. Other group tours included visits to the Kansas Power and Light Company, the Parade of Homes in Kansas City and selected Manhattan homes with a realty agent. Guest speakers invited to meetings discussed insurance policies and gave tips on features to look for when considering purchase of a new home.

Pre-Nursing Club members assisted with the Bloodmobile and manned booths at the Activities Carnival and All-University Open House. The coeds toured St. Mary's Hospital, the University of Kansas Medical Center Research Hospital and Irwin Army Hospital. A field trip to Topeka during spring semester also was planned.

Meeting the demands of gridiron fans, Angel Flight members sell food and drinks at all football games. As a money-making project, the organization provided workers for the privately-owned concession stands.

ROTC auxiliaries work in community projects

Two womens' military service organizations assisted and promoted activities undertaken by Army and Air Force ROTC groups.

In addition to marching in military drills and reviews, members of Light Brigade sold name tags and tapes to ROTC men and handled concessions at University concerts. The coeds also worked for the Manhattan Federation of Handicapped Children, Irwin Army Hospital and with underprivileged children from the local area.

Angel Flight members, in conjunction with Arnold Air Society, worked during the annual Bloodmobile drive. Affiliates of the Air Force, the women entertained wounded soldiers who had returned from Vietnam and sold refreshments at all football games and special events.

Military societies compete in drills, hear experts

Attainment of military professionalism was the goal of the men's military groups on campus.

Men in the National Honorary Society of Pershing Rifles traveled to the University of Kansas and the University of Illinois to participate in drill meets and, in April, hosted the 7th Regimental Drill Meet. Members directed traffic at football and basketball games and attended the Commander's Banquet in the spring.

As part of their seminar for cadets, Scabbard and Blade members invited military experts from Fort Riley to speak about Army Correctional Training facilities on the post. The men of "L" Company gave recognition to outstanding cadets in military science and earned the annual Journal Award from the National Society.

Air Force ROTC cadets were active in projects designed both for personal enjoyment and service to the University community.

Tours to pilot training centers was one method of teaching used in the Air Force Flight Instruction Program. With a 90 per cent increase in membership over last year, the program ranked as one of the largest of its kind in the nation. Cadets completed a training course which included instruction in navigation and weather.

In the fall, Arnold Air Society aided in coordinating the annual Bloodmobile. The group donated a Vietnam memorial plaque to the Union and ushered at football games. Members also exchanged information and ideas with similar groups in Central and South America.

Hosting freshmen and parents, Newman Club provides an evening buffet at the Catholic Student Center. Campus religious groups held open houses following the President's Convocation for freshmen in fall.

Newman Club explores current Catholic thought

Sunday evening programs sponsored by the Newman Apostolate served to keep students and faculty informed of current thinking in the Catholic Church. Student members of other campus religious groups often joined with Catholic students to discuss the crucial problems facing their respective churches and possible steps which could be taken to resolve them. At Christmas, Newman members staged a tree-decorating party and coupled this activity with a project to prepare candy and cookies destined for distribution among the patients in Irwin Army Hospital at Ft. Riley.

Religious groups provide ski trip, Arabic lessons

Religious organizations sponsored retreats, community programs and discussion groups as part of their work to better communications between campus churches and the University.

Participating with the Kansas and Nebraska chapters, the local Baptist Student Union attempted to initiate a 20-member overseas missionary program. Other activities undertaken by members during the year included organizing and presenting noon devotions, evening vespers and occasional interdenominational social functions.

Members of the Grace Baptist Student Fellowship sponsored religious programs in the chapels at Fort Riley throughout the year. A member's home or the Grace Baptist Church frequently provided the setting for informal sing-outs with formal meetings often featuring guest speakers who lectured on contemporary trends of thought in the areas of psychology and religion.

In conjunction with the University Christian Movement, members of Roger Williams Fellowship sponsored a ski trip to Colorado during semester break, hosted a coffeehouse and organized retreats in Topeka and Kansas City.

In addition to offering a tuition-free course in the Arabic language, Islamic Association published two issues of Al-Islam and compiled a yearbook which included papers on Islam. At two dinners, student members celebrated Muslim festivals. Guest speakers were invited to attend on both occasions as were persons in the University not affiliated with the Muslim faith.

Mennonites, Methodists conduct service projects

Religious groups offered the student the form of worship to which he was accustomed and a community of persons with similar beliefs.

During the year, Mennonite Fellowship members were volunteer workers in both the 4-H and Friendship Tutoring programs. After attending a graduate seminar in Michigan, the group returned to launch a service program in conjunction with the LaFene Student Health Center.

Open to women of all denominations, Kappa Phi, Methodist women's group, sponsored weekly visits to the soldiers in Irwin Army Hospital. Alums serving in the Legion of Light in Korea received money and sweaters from Kappa Phi women who also sent delegates to the national meeting of the Council of Chapters in Iowa.

Protestant groups discuss drama, race, ministry

Christian students were encouraged to become members of campus organizations affiliated with their individual religious denominations.

Lutheran Student Association members participated in a "live-in" training course sponsored by the School for Human Dignity of Chicago. Drama, art and social action groups were formed by members as was a discussion of "war and peace" with Catholic students on campus. Sunday afternoons found members participating in interracial discussions at the Douglass Center.

Chi Alpha members, chartered under the Assembly of God Church, launched their year's activities with a retreat at Rock Springs with the other Kansas chapters. During the year, personal ministry was stressed to the married and single Evangelists through the formation of three individual groups featuring the Cornelius Cell, a Bible study and a prayer group.

International students were the guest of Christian Fellowship at an International House party in Colorado during the Christmas season. Members also attended daily prayer meetings in Danforth Chapel throughout the year.

Providing a chance for vet med wives to relax and get better acquainted, the American Veterinary Medicine Association Auxiliary serves a tea after one of the regular winter meeting sessions in the Union.

AIA, AVMA wives sponsor fund-raising events

Striving for knowledge of their husbands' fields of study, auxiliaries planned special study programs and meetings throughout the year.

In addition to study meetings, the AIA auxiliary planned money-making projects such as a bake sale, a rummage sale, a tupperware party and selling chances on a blender. The money was used to establish a gift fund for items needed in the College of Architecture and Design.

The AVMA auxiliary, composed of wives of vet med students, raffled beef for a spring money project. At one of the monthly meetings, Mrs. John Cochran, former Mrs. America, explained her duties and election to office while at another meeting new vet med wives were the guests of regular members at an introductory tea.

Auxiliaries hostess teas, banquets, social events

Chi Delphia, auxiliary to Delta Chi fraternity, conducted a pillow steal to raise funds, then used the money to purchase a gift for the house. The coeds acted as hostesses for Delta Chi functions and also made party favors. After their initiation, Delta Chi pledges received paddles from their Chi Delphia pledge mothers.

Members of Engin-dears hostessed at Engineering Open House, junior college day and at all engineering banquets. To promote the college, the coeds made a television commercial and a film to be shown at junior colleges and high schools throughout the state. Calendar girls appearing in the Engineer Magazine were members of the group as were the finalists chosen in the St. Patricia content for Engineering Open House.

Agricultural Education Wives Club members served as hostesses at a June tea for vocational agriculture teachers' wives. Social functions of the group included a Valentine party, potluck dinner and a spring picnic. The women also were responsible for providing the decorations for their May banquet with the Agricultural Education Club.

Self-defense techniques for women were demonstrated at a fall meeting of the Dames Club. Canvassing for the March of Dimes and packing cartons of magazines and treats for the servicemen in Vietnam were service projects undertaken by the club. Money raised from selling childrens' toys at Christmas went towards financing club social events which included a pizza party at semester break, a barbeque and a spring formal.

Service clubs establish leadership, responsibility

While aiding the campus and community, members of service groups gained experience in establishing leadership and responsibility.

In an effort to aid in the cultural development of young Negro girls, Community Sisters organized a trip to Kansas City's Swope Park Zoo, pajama parties and various holiday gatherings. Black culture in America was discussed and a talent show featured as part of Negro History Week.

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, assisted the University by sponsoring the student book exchange, providing coat checks and ushers for concerts and conventions and maintaining outdoor bulletin boards. Community service included a party for underprivileged children and working in the multiple sclerosis drive.

The University again received coverage from the Red Cross after Circle K members completed their sixth successful sponsorship of the Bloodmobile drive. In association with the Manhattan Kiwanis Club, the men served at the pancake feed and judged in the children's pet and hobby show.

Helping out at a Christmas party for the Community Sisters, a student distributes presents to "little sisters" from Manhattan. The party was one of several social activities planned by the Negro coeds.

Ethnic groups devote projects to understanding

Providing resource material for the "Black Africa Today" seminar offered by the University for Man was the responsibility of members of the African Students' Association. The students observed the Organization of African Unity Day and offered showings of African movies during the year. Organization members represented the countries of Nigeria, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya, Rhodesia and the United States.

Americans who had visited any Arab states presented a series of speeches at coffee hours hosted by members of the Organization of Arab Students. In the spring, members staged their annual banquet which featured a guest speaker who discussed various aspects of Israeli culture. Associate membership was open to all American and international students and faculty.

In its seventh year at the University, the Chinese Student Association presented a Chinese movie during the spring semester. A Chinese New Year's party, picnics and a Christmas dinner party were among social events sponsored by the group. Club membership was comprised of 150 students and their immediate families.

Grid Gitters, Gibson Girls host athletic recruits

Grid Gitters and Gibson Girls cooperated with the athletic department to recruit top notch athletes for the University's athletic programs.

Started as a program to host football recruits, Grid Gitters expanded their activities to include all prospective athletes. Gitter representatives appeared on television in Topeka and Wichita to explain club functions and also sold kazoo noisemakers before both football and basketball games with the University of Kansas.

As a subsidiary of Grid Gitters, Gibson Girls acted as escorts for the more than 200 athletic recruits who visited the University during the year. Corresponding with the recruits before and after their campus visits was another responsibility of the 59 coeds chosen by Grid Gitter members.

Providing the nucleus of the K-Block flash card section, Statesmen and Statesmates plan special activities to increase spirit within the student body both before and during major athletic events.

Pep clubs build spirit, enthusiasm for sport events

Athletic events received backing of members of Statesmates and Statesmen. To promote spirit, the groups worked together on K-Block and Pep Coordinating Council. The sale of novelties and the staging of pre-game rallies and bonfires encouraged students to support the efforts of the Wildcat squad in home football games.

In a drive to improve library references, Statesmates, womens' pep club, sponsored a faculty-football player auction. The coeds also decorated hoops used at the basketball games.

Statesmen purchased a public address system for home football games and pep rallies. In its fifth year, the group organized the K-Block section which was responsible for relaying messages through arrangement of flash cards.

Clubs feature training in judo, parachuting, racing

Judo Club, Sport Parachute Club and Sports Car Club, offered a variety of activities and training for faculty and student sports enthusiasts.

Judo Club, under the instruction of Issac Wakabayashi, competed in regional meets, including Big Eight competition. For the first time, a member of the club attended national competition in Sacremento, Calif., and participated in three rounds. Coed members concentrated on kata, the demonstration of judo techniques.

Sport Parachute Club planned weekend jump meets at a local airport. The group competed in meets with University of Kansas, Wichita and Ft. Riley clubs and sent members to national competition in Florida in the spring. Before trying free fall jumps and maneuvers, members finished 12 hours of required ground training.

Sports Car Club awarded trophies for winners of biweekly time-speed-distance rallys and competed in an intercollegiate rally and gymkhana with University of Kansas. Members provided a weather information booth in the Union for vacation travelers, sponsored a scholarship, auto show and a picnic rally in the spring.

Ham radio, flying clubs offer enjoyment, training

Flying Club and Amateur Radio Club combined pleasure with practical training.

Flying Club, which owned three planes, entered intercollegiate and national competitions. Members logged 1200 hours of flying time, including trips to Texas and California, watched films reviewing techniques and considered designs for a proposed club plane insignia.

Amateur Radio Club concentrated on adding modern equipment to facilities on campus. At Engineers' Open House, members showed techniques and, as a money-raising project, sold surplus gear. The club also planned contests in which members contacted foreign stations.

K-State Amatuer Radio Club — TOP ROW: Willis L. Boughton, Judy Jakowatz, James A. Trennepohl, Vincent W. Weber, Robert G. Kirk. SECOND ROW: Norris D. Going, Don G. Richter, Robert D. CR's aid in campaigns, support GOP candidates

Election year stepped up activity for the approximately 800 College Republicans. In addition to campaigning for national, state and local GOP candidates, members attended the Kansas College Republican Issues Convention in December, hosted the Kansas College Federation state convention in March and organized and sponsored the annual Miss College Republican contest.

Forensic team members capture honors in debate

Numerous debate tournaments netted a variety of awards for the 15 members of the Forensic Union. In the spring, 1968 University of Nebraska debate tournament, the group captured first place and an individual member later received first place in the oratory division at the Missouri Valley forensic tournament. The organization placed second and fourth in debate at Ft. Hays State College and third at Pittsburgh State.

Collegiate Young Democrats demonstrated their support for the major Democratic contenders for the Presidency by traveling to the key primary states to campaign. After Senator Kennedy's death, the CYD's worked to establish a memorial in his honor at the University.

Chaparajos, Hoedowners promote Western styles

To promulgate interest in the heritage of the West was the goal of both the Chaparajos Club and the Hoedowners Square Dance Club.

Rodeo activities highlighted the year for members of the Chaparajos Club. In addition to sponsoring the University Intercollegiate Rodeo, the organization sent a team to compete in rodeos in Wisconsin and Iowa. Members also took part in a rodeo match, showdeo and trial ride.

Area dances often featured double square exhibitions performed by the Hoedowners Square Dance Club. The 63 members sponsored their annual square dance festival in the spring and later participated in the Colorado State University Aggie Haylofters jamboree at Fort Collins.

Future Farmers, 4-H'ers aid in local state events

Service projects and social activities were two types of events staged by members of Future Farmers of America and Collegiate 4-H Club.

Sponsors of a banquet honoring their new state officers, members of Future Farmers of America also assisted in conducting state contests and the state convention. Other activities included participating in Ag Science Day and sponsoring the annual FFA Sweetheart contest.

Collegiate 4-H Club members travelled to surrounding counties to act as judges for 4-H days. As a service project, 4-H members took charge of a clean-up project at Rock Springs Ranch. The club also provided leaders for a Riley County program involving underprivileged children.

Housing

Students, whether in a house or residence hall or apartment, share memories of fellowship and tears, of pranks and coffee-drugged nights of studying. And daily experiences that they share, ranging from a muddy tug-of-war to a humorous songfest, bind students closer to one another. There are no idle moments really wasted in such a group for students are learning how to live.

Student accommodations filled to capacity in city

Students returning to Manhattan in the fall discovered living accommodations were scarce due to an influx of military personnel in the area. In addition to campus housing, off-campus apartments were filled to capacity during the year.

The Council on Student Affairs approved two major changes in housing policies, room visitation in dormitories and self-regulated hours for sophomore women. The Council also appointed a board to review off-campus housing, to investigate any complaints from tenants or landlords and to make recommendations for the improvement and enforcement of safety regulations.

Rush Week innovations include micro-lab, picnic

Innovations introduced into fall rush assisted in making it a more personal experience for participants. Smaller section meetings replaced the general information meeting held in past years. A picnic and a micro-lab also were implemented into the week's activities. In contrast to the former late afternoon arrival of pledge lists, the 11 sororities were notified of their 322 pledges by noon on the final day of rush week activities.

Continuance of their summer rush program, which included visits to potential students by fraternity representatives, yielded the 23 fraternities 373 new members. Adding the 101 men pledged during fall rush, the fraternities boasted a gain of 100 members over the 1967-68 first semester.

IFC votes on measure to eliminate formal rush

After considering the proposal for several months, Interfraternity Council voted in January to abolish rush week in favor of pledging during the summer and school term. Reasons for the change were costs of rush week and the increasing number of summer pledges. Panhellenic Council voted to open informal rush to Manhattan freshmen and second semester sophomores.

DZs enter HQ contest, earn State Day awards

Presenting the skit "A Poll O' Apes or You Can't Get Anywhere with the Monkeys in Anderson Hall," the women of Delta Zeta teamed up with Tau Kappa Epsilon to enter the 1969 Harlequinade competition. At the Delta Zeta State Day in Topeka, members of the local chapter received awards for the highest scholarship among DZ pledges and actives in Kansas. In the fall, DZs sponsored a sing-along for the patients in Irwin Army Hospital and later prepared popcorn which was sent overseas to soldiers stationed in Vietnam. As a means to raise funds, the pledge class acted as hostesses for the Lambda chapter's annual bridge tournament in the spring.

Phi Kappa Tau provides Election Day bus service

Harlequinade '68 awards for best production and best actor went to Phi Kappa Tau, who with Kappa Delta, acted out campus blunders in the skit "Flour Power, or LSD is Neat, But You Can't Beat Wheat." In spring, 1968, the fraternity also retired the Circle K Golden Drop Award and received the Domain Chief's Scholarship Improvement Award. On Election Day in November, members offered free bus transportation to Manhattan voters needing rides to the polls. Participation in intramurals won the Phi Taus third place overall in football. Highlighting the men's social calendar of events was the annual Cannonball Formal in the fall semester.

During the year, Phi Kappa Tau men purchased a frame house adjacent to their fraternity at 1606 Fairchild and remodeled it for a study hall.

Acacia wins national award for rush publication

At the national conclave of Acacia fraternities in August, the local chapter received the award for the best chapter publication on the basis of their rush booklet printed in the fall. As a Christmas service project, the men donated toys to needy children in the Manhattan community. Acacias also won the intramural league softball championship and the first place award for their bowling team. The fraternity was represented by members in Phi Kappa Phi, Alpha Tau Alpha and Student Senate. Among their yearly social activities were periodical weekend parties in the house, the Night on the Nile costume party, a Playboy Club party and the Christmas formal.

AGR redecoration adds home entertainment unit

Remodeling their chapter house comprised the major activity of the men of Alpha Gamma Rho. In addition to purchasing new furniture for the living room, members also financed the installation of a new home entertainment unit. With Alpha Delta Pi, the AGRs participated in their annual woodchopping party which yielded a sufficient stock of fire wood for both houses. Other social functions included a Roulette Party, the annual Pink Rose Formal and entertaining AGRs visiting from Iowa State and Oklahoma State Universities. As members of the social-professional agriculture fraternity, AGRs volunteered to serve on all University judging teams.

Phi Delta Theta wins second place for HQ skit

Second place honors in Harlequinade '68 were won by Phi Delta Theta who, with Alpha Delta Pi, performed their original skit entitled "Cheese It — It's the Rat, or the Rat's Out of the Bag." Phi Delts' participation in the John F. Kennedy memorial community services included bussing retarded children from Manhattan to the Gage Park Zoo in Topeka. The fraternity also adopted an orphaned boy living in Thailand.

For the second consecutive year, high scholarship brought the Kansas Gamma chapter recognition on the Phi Delta Theta national honor roll. Phi Delts were members of Commerce Council, Arnold Air Society and Scabbard and Blade.

Phi Kaps launch construction on house expansion

Their entry in the Homecoming house decorations contest merited second place honors for the men of Phi Kappa Theta. As a community service, the pledge class provided gifts, food and entertainment for members of the local needy family the fraternity adopted at Christmas.

During the year, Phi Kaps began construction on the new house addition which will feature expanded kitchen and recreational facilities and a new library and music room. Members escorted their dates to a Christmas party and a Fish Formal. Outstanding Phi Kaps were found in Sigma Tau, Phi Eta Sigma and Tau Sigma Delta honoraries and in Arnold Air Society.

Triangle chapter places first in national rankings

In their fifth year on campus, men of Triangle fraternity were recognized by their national headquarters as the best chapter in the nation. On campus, Triangle received first prize in Greek Sing and at both the national and local levels, the group received awards for the best overall scholarship improvement. Triangle members participated in Blue Key honorary and on Student Senate.

Social activities of the fraternity included the chapter's annual weekend house party and football game with the chapter from the University of Kansas. Triangle men also organized and sponsored their annual Christmas formal and an informal party and dance in the spring.

Independents compete during Spring Fling '68

Students found a variety of outlets for their spring fever in activities staged during the week of Spring Fling '68. Events began with skits introducing candidates for Wildcat and Wildkitten. After an evening of voting by residents of independent living groups, Kathy Michaels, West hall, and Gary Metzinger, Marlatt hall, were selected as Spring Fling royalty. Highlighting the week was the bed race on Saturday. Smurthwaite, West and Straube won first prize for their "banana split" bed decoration. After the contest, students attended a picnic, participated in outdoor games and later danced to the sounds of the Slightly Sensational Showmen band.

Water-filled balloons provide coeds with weapons to use in harrassing contestants in the bed race.

Replacing the regular food center lunches, a picnic provides a break during the Saturday contests.

Ending the activity, Spring Fling royalty Kathy Michaels and Gary Metzinger reign over the dance.

Rushing to the finish line, teams vie for honors in the bod race which feature teams of four men carrying coeds on their shoulders. Other games included tug-of-war, camel fight and grape pass.

Despite water-filled balloons thrown by spectators and a wobbly bed, Ford and Marlatt dormitory residents finish first in the bed race. Entries follow a curving, hilly race course along campus avenues.

During a leadership conference of residence halls, a group of students talk about problems as Chester Peters, vice-president of academic affairs, offers counsel. The session was a fall project of KSUARH.

Despite hundreds of neighbors, dormitory residents usually prefer the companionship of a few friends.

Campus dorms introduce room visitation policies

To provide a more informal atmosphere for relaxing and studying, residence halls formulated room visitation policies for men and women. In one study, a majority of students recommended that the visitation policy be enacted on a permanent campus-wide basis. Hall officials participated in a Kansas State University Association of Residence Halls Leadership Conference and met with other schools at a national residence hall convention. The association also organized the annual Spring Fling, Inter-dorm Sing and forums on campus politics and NSA for hall residents.

Straube graduates hear employment interviewers

To aid their graduating residents in learning of potential job opportunities, Smith Scholarship House periodically invited professional interviewers to speak at house dinners. Their entry in the Spring Fling '68 bed decorations contest won the men first prize. In intramurals, Straube residents placed first in swimming, second in wrestling and fourth in cross country in the independent division. The house was represented by members in Sigma Tau engineering honorary, Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and on the varsity soccer and rowing teams. New equipment was purchased for the weight training program and plans were formed for updating the house library.

At a dinner attended by Dean of Women Margaret Lahey, Smurthwaite coeds initiate new house members.

Smith Scholarship House residents, at 331 N. 17th, claim the highest grade point average for the past three semesters. Throughout the year, the men attended exchange functions with Smurthwaite women.

Smith residents honor alums at anniversary tea

Residents of Smith Scholarship House celebrated the house's 10th anniversary on campus with a tea honoring alums and past housemothers. In addition to sponsoring a needy family at Christmas, the men hosted a spring formal and Christmas party and, throughout the year, were active in exchange functions with Straube and Smurthwaite. The house captured third overall in intramurals competition and totaled a record number of points for the 1968 season. Smith men continued to maintain the highest grade point average among all the living groups while participating in campus groups including Student Senate and the Wildcat marching band.

Friday night coffeehouses attract students to Van Zile hall on Petticoat Lane. The special programs are a part of extended educational opportunities provided by the residence hall for honors students.

Remodeled Van Zile opens as honors dormitory

After one year of extensive remodeling, Van Zile hall was reopened in the fall to house 140 honors students. Under a visiting hours program instituted early in the year, men and women were allowed to visit in each others' rooms during 12-hour periods on specified days. In order that residents' views be adequately represented to dorm administrators, a temporary hall governing board was established by the students.

Twice each month, residents sponsored a Friday night coffeehouse in the basement of the dormitory. Open to the public, the coffeehouse set the stage for informal discussions and performances by individual and group entertainers.

Boyd hall women seek donations for UNICEF

As community service projects, the women of Boyd hall went trick or treating for UNICEF on Halloween and adopted an underprivileged Manhattan family at Christmas. Father's Weekend, a Christmas formal, spring party and "grub" party during Dead Week comprised the social activities sponsored by the residence hall. High academic achievement of individual residents was recognized at the scholarship dinner.

Boyd hall coeds included members of Engindears, the 1968 Rodeo Queen and a finalist in the annual Miss Agriculture contest. As part of a remodeling project, new furniture was purchased for the dormitory's living room and lobby.

Ford coeds plan parties for Head Start children

Children in Project Head Start were the guests of Ford hall residents at Halloween and Christmas parties. Weekends were set aside by the coeds to entertain parents and, during the football season, residents hostessed post-game social gatherings. Ford hall housed two semi-finalists in the Homecoming Queen contest, the president of AWS and the Miss Kansas Rodeo Queen. Social events offered to the women included a Christmas formal, Activities Carnival and periodical functions with men's residence halls. The Kenney Ford hall scholarship was awarded to the resident who had maintained the highest grade point average for both semesters during the year.

Goodnow claims trophy for women's intramurals

To acquaint new residents with dorm living, Goodnow hall sponsored a fall orientation program which featured a mini-carnival modeled after the Union Activities Carnival. In intramurals, the hall placed first in three events to capture the women's trophy. In addition to holiday parties and a winter formal, residents attended dorm coffeehouses and a birthday party for Isaac T. Goodnow. Among the 585 residents were two Homecoming Queen finalists, the Future Farmers of America Queen, the winner of the K-State Players' Best Actress award and members of Mortar Board, Spurs, Alpha Lambda Delta honoraries and Angel Flight and Light Brigade auxiliaries.

For Spring Fling open house, residents of Goodnow hall featured the "Key Club" theme on each floor.

Open during the summer for pre-enrollment and rush week, Goodnow hall provides air-conditioned rooms.

Goodnow residents relax after dinner by listening to their favorite songs in the dorm's social room.

Before returning to her room, a Goodnow coed carries out the daily ritual of checking the mailbox.

Accommodating 225 coeds, Putnam hall is site of informal post-game teas during the football season.

Despite an increase in synthetic fabrics, a Putnam coed discovers some clothes still require ironing.

Putnam receives trophy for highest dorm grades

Putnam hall, housing 225 coeds, was awarded the traveling residence hall scholarship trophy for the third consecutive semester. The recipient of the KSUARH Outstanding Leadership Award and a Royal Purple queen finalist were Putnam coeds. Residents also participated in intramurals, rodeo and rifle teams, Light Brigade and K-State Singers. The women invited Placement Center job interviewers visiting campus to dinner and discussions on job opportunities. During the Christmas season, the hall aided an underprivileged family and sponsored the annual Putnam formal. Other social functions included periodical faculty teas and Mothers' and Fathers' weekends.

Under the silence of the hair dryer, a West hall coed catches up on developments in the fashion world.

West dinner raises $100 for rowing team donation

To raise money for the rowing team, West hall sponsored a "Sloppy Joe" project which netted $100. The 303 women also contributed two statues and more than 50 books to the library in Derby Food Center. Service projects undertaken by the coeds were donating gifts to residents of Parkview Manor and adopting an underprivileged family at Christmas. Halloween caroling, Mothers' and Fathers' Weekends and a spring formal comprised the hall's major social events. Residents also entertained faculty at dinners, sponsored an Open House and participated in intramural sports. Among the coeds was the 1968 Spring Fling Wildkitten Kathy Michaels.

Individual floor meetings scheduled during the year keep West hall coeds informed of upcoming activities.

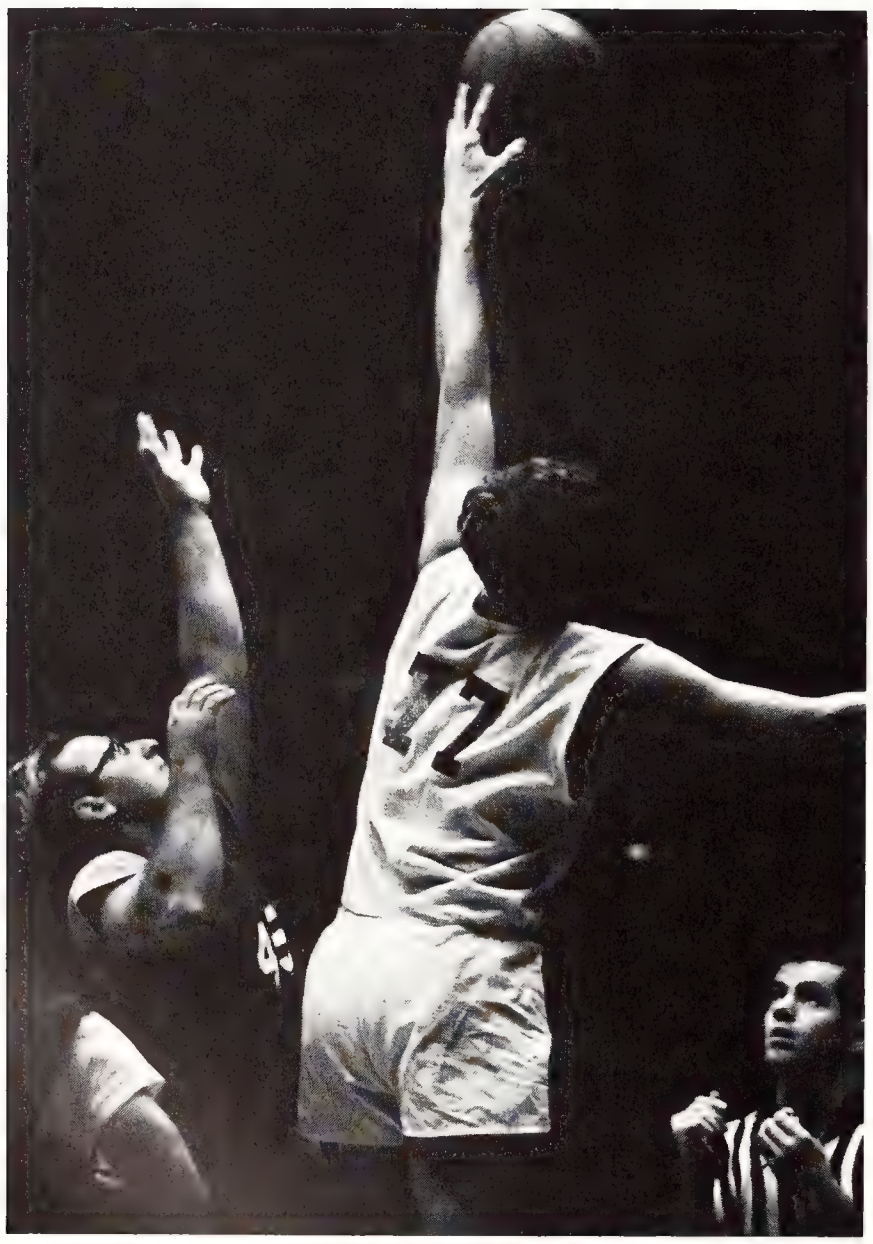
Class work is forgotten as warm weather lures dorm residents outside for a fast game of touch football.



Finalists in intramural basketball, Haymaker IV and the Jolly Bodies play off in the "Super Ball" game.

Students examine a drawing assignment for an engineering course during a study session in the dorm.

Two floors in Haymaker receive intramural honors

In a project experimenting with dorm visitation hours, Haymaker hall was the only men's dorm involved. After two semesters of allowing women in the rooms at designated hours, visitation received final approval in the spring semester.

As another experimental project, carpeting was added to the hallways of four floors to test for reduction of maintenance and noise. Haymaker also added lounge chairs to the rooms.

In intramurals, fourth floor won the fall basketball "Super Ball" and seventh floor won the overall dorm division intramural championship of 1968. During fall enrollment, Haymaker sponsored a parking lot get-acquainted dance.

Sandwiches and fruit are among the snack foods available to a hungry Haymaker resident late at night.

Initiated on an experimental basis, Haymaker was the first men's dorm to permit coed visitors in rooms.

Residence hall men find that Indian summer provides the perfect weather for a strenuous game of football.

Ping-pong and card-playing tournaments within the hall were popular among Marlatt men. Active in intramural competition, residents regularly viewed informative films shown by Student Health officials.

Marlatt earns highest grades among men's dorms

Marlatt hall men were recognized for achieving the highest grades among men's residence halls for both semesters of the 1967-68 school year. At Christmas, the residents donated a tree and food to a needy family in Manhattan. Other projects included constructing a Homecoming decoration and participating in Spring Fling activities. All-dorm functions were replaced by parties and formals sponsored by the individual floors. The 600 residents included two student senators and the president of Men's Glee Club. Available to residents for the first time was a color television set in the dormitory's social room and a library established in Kramer Food Center.

Forming "GO" with lighted windows, Moore residents join spirited activities during Homecoming weekend.

Residents of Moore attend all-dorm parties at a local pub and sponsor a semi-formal in the spring.

Moore residents discuss controversial film topics

Due to a campus housing shortage, Moore hall became coed in the fall. Men occupied the upper eight floors while 75 women roomed on the first floor and basement levels. Other changes included room visitation and publication of the dormitory's first newspaper, "Moore or Less." Hall programs featured discussions on several controversial films such as "Insight or Insanity (LSD)" and one on black-white relations. The hall governing board formed a grounds committee to landscape the area surrounding the building and purchased a color television. Social functions sponsored by the residence hall were a Christmas dance and an "Honest Abe" party.

Displaying the key to a 'Cats victory over Kansas, Moore's football player stands his lone night watch.

When visiting campus, athletic prospects often are invited to tour the Athletic dorm at 1710 Denison and dine with residents. During the year, a concentrated effort is made to recruit top athletes.

Coaches provide tutoring for athletic dorm men

Housing 179 men representing every University sport, the Athletic Residence hall installed weight training equipment in the recreation room and added a library. Other facilities available were pool and ping-pong tables, sauna bath and a swimming pool. To assist residents with their academic work, individual coaches provided tutoring programs. A dormitory governing board, with representatives from each floor, was organized to formulate policies and suggest hall improvements. At Christmas, the men attended a party with the Gibson Girls and in the spring, the K-Club organized a dance for all athletes on campus as well as dormitory residents.

Jardine married students petition for storm shelter

Concerned with the protection of residents, married students at Jardine Terrace passed petitions asking for a storm shelter. Committees also met with University administrators and began a study on costs and structures. In conjunction with the storm shelter, plans began for a married students' recreation center in the shelter.

With the new stadium, residents foresaw the problem of fans parking in Jardine parking lots and organized a patrol to enforce regulations. Jardine residents also were entitled to receive cable television at special reduced rates.

Student demand grows for off-campus dwellings

Off-campus housing in Manhattan grew in demand as an estimated 5,000 students lived off-campus in apartment houses, rooms or trailer courts. Construction of modern apartment complexes, designed to meet students' needs, also continued. Off-campus Women, an association representing all single women not housed in organized living groups, sponsored a Homecoming Queen finalist and visited soldiers at Irwin Army Hospital at Christmas. The group also planned a toy exchange for underprivileged Manhattan children and scheduled a spring party.

Townees find their own rooms at home to be quieter and more conducive to study than residence halls.

Sharing daily experiences with their parents keeps family ties strong for students residing at home.

Tempted by the aroma, a Manhattan resident checks to learn what his mother is preparing for dinner.

Living at home presents advantages for students

For many students attending the University, living at home presented a unique situation unfamiliar to the typical student. Finding advantages to the situation, Manhattan students enjoyed close family ties, home cooked meals, a quiet place to study and generally unrestricted curfews.

Feeling isolated from campus activities, finding a parking place on campus and difficulty in meeting people were the major problems often confronting townees. By joining Greek and other campus organizations, they frequently found better ties with the University community.

One of the distinct advantages enjoyed by townees is eating home-cooked meals in a quiet atmosphere.

Arriving home late from the library, a Manhattan resident anticipates a snack before going to bed.

Substitutions for studying can be found as easily at home as in any organized campus living group.

Athletics

From the rugged outdoors of Tuttle Creek to hard wood floors of Ahearn Field House, athletes prepare strenuously for the decisive battle of competition. Moments of excitement drain exhaustion from faces as muscles strain under the tension of contact. Undergoing new experiences, students rediscover contrasts in athletics — hopes versus achievements, defeat versus victory — as they learn from the world of University sports.

New stadium dedication marks first football game

Completed in time for dedication at the first game of the season, the new $1.6 million football stadium climaxed five years of work by the Athletic Council. Plans were launched in October for an Olympic-sized swimming pool after the Board of Regents approved the sale of bonds that, combined with a student fee accumulation of $87,000, made $737,000 available for construction of the facility. The completion date was set for 1970.

Under the auspices of H. B. Lee, athletic director, the athletic department began preparations for relocating all field sports' facilities to the area adjoining the new stadium when construction programs forces the department to move out of Memorial Stadium and the football practice fields north of the Field House.

H. B. Lee, athletic director for 12 years, resigned to become president of a closed-circuit TV network.

For admittance to a football game, a student is required to present both his ID card and season ticket.

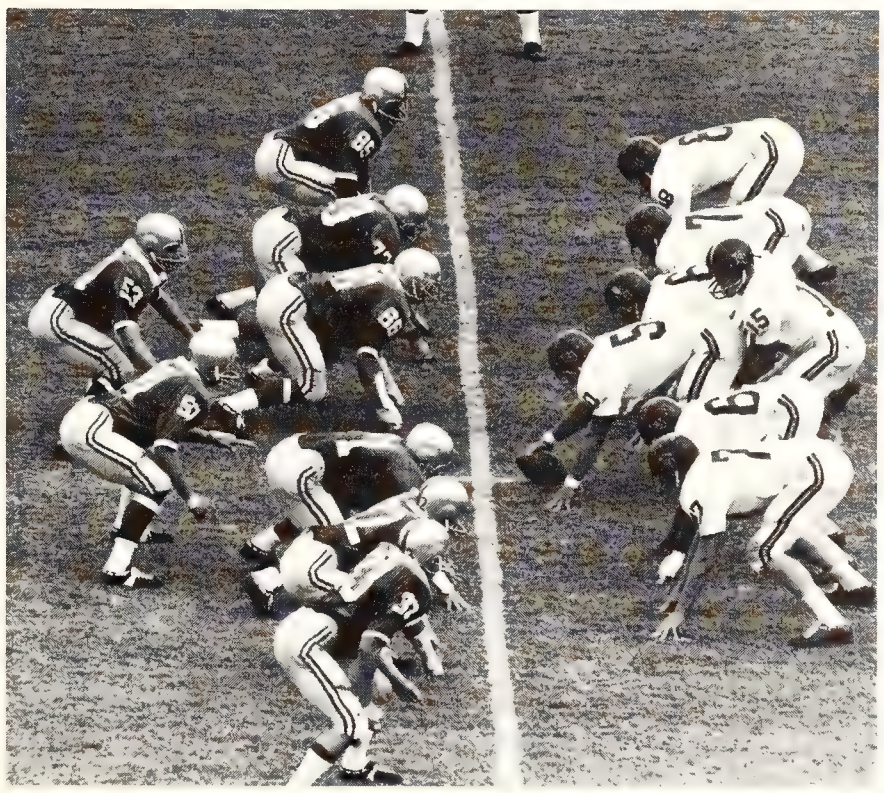
Purple pride dominates as 'Cats post four wins

Purple Pride spelled victory for the 'Cats as they ended the season with four big wins. Coach Gibson's Wildcats were the first to win four games since the 1955 squad compiled a 4-6 record. The 1968 team moved out of the Big Eight cellar to tie Oklahoma State for sixth place. Their 4-5 record ranked the Cats fifth in total games played. Contributing to success were veteran flanker Dave Jones who was selected to play in the North-South game and sophomore Lynn Dickey who broke the Big Eight passing record.

During their Big Eight opener, K-State's defensive line allows Iowa State only 65 yards in the air.



One of the nation's leading kickers is senior Bob Coble, punting 77 times for a 42.2 yard average.

In his second year as football coach, Vince Gibson gives instructions to a player going on the field.

'Cats grab two victories in grid road competition

Proving they have come a long way since last year, the 'Cats enjoyed a two win, three loss record on the road this season. Three of their road games were against the tough bowl teams of Penn State, Virginia Tech and Oklahoma.

Playing a bad third quarter against the Nittany Lions of Penn State turned the score against the Wildcats, causing a 25-9 loss. Virginia Tech bowed, 34-19, to the 'Cats powerful passing game.

Scoring more points against the Oklahoma Sooners than in the last 40 years was not enough to give the 'Cats a win. Threatening until the end, the Wildcats lost 35-20. Defeating the Cornhuskers of Nebraska, 12-0, gave the Wildcats their first conference win since 1964 and their first conference shutout since 1955.

Home fans witness victory after four-year drought

As the 1968 football season closed, the Wildcats had compiled a 2-3 home game record. In the first win in the KSU Stadium and the first home victory in four seasons, the 'Cats defeated Colorado State, 21-0. Flanker Dave Jones set two all-time Big Eight records, in total yardage and total reception, in the competition against Iowa State, but the Cyclones still managed to out play the Wildcats and win, 23-14.

Missouri whipped the Wildcats, 56-20, in the annual Parents' Day game. The famed Mizzou defense held the 'Cats to eight first downs and 39 yards rushing. Orange Bowl bound Kansas ran into tougher than expected opposition in the 1968 Homecoming game. A third quarter K-State rally tied the Jayhawks at 21 points, but KU later pulled ahead to win the contest, 38-29.

As a tribute to the 1969 seniors, the Wildcats claimed victory in the final game. After trailing in the first half, the 'Cats surged ahead to beat Oklahoma State, 21-14, compiling the best football season record since 1955.

Frosh 'Cats defeat KU after dropping three games

Head freshman grid coach Leroy Montgomery completed his second season at Kansas State by leading the young 'Cats to their second win in two years. Although highly favored before the season opened, the freshmen lost their first three games by wide margins before edging the University of Kansas Jayhawks in the final game, 22-21.

Oklahoma State proved too much for the 'Cats in the opening game of the 1968 season, downing the freshmen, 39-7. Looking for a win on their home field, the Wildcats rallied in the third quarter of the contest against Missouri to score 14 points, but Mizzou regained control to win, 28-14. Despite evidence of K-State's improved rushing techniques, Nebraska shut out the 'Cats in the season's third game with a 29-0 score.

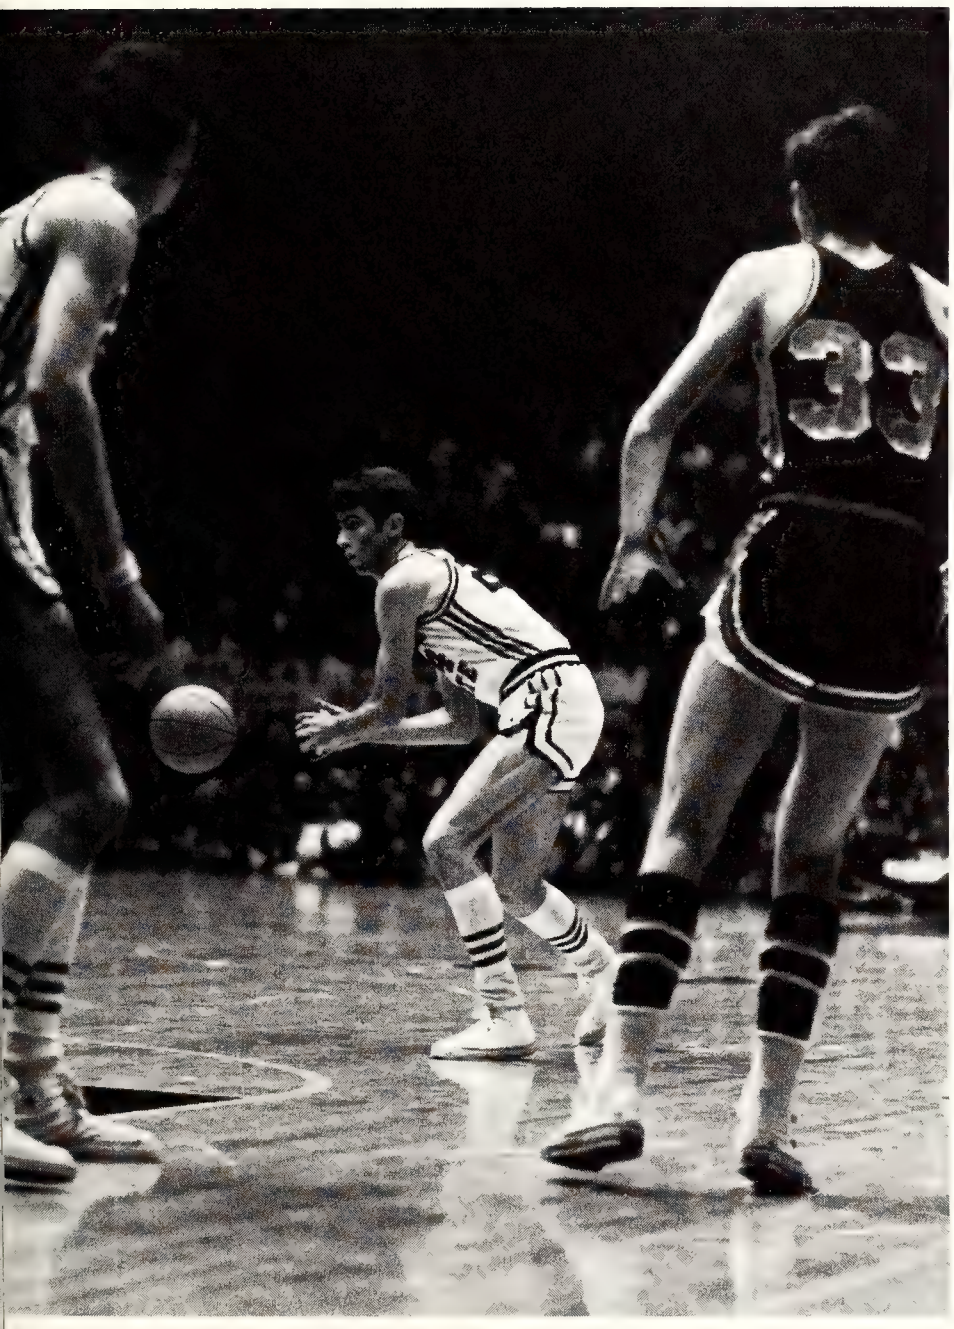
Wildcat records bleak in pre-season contests

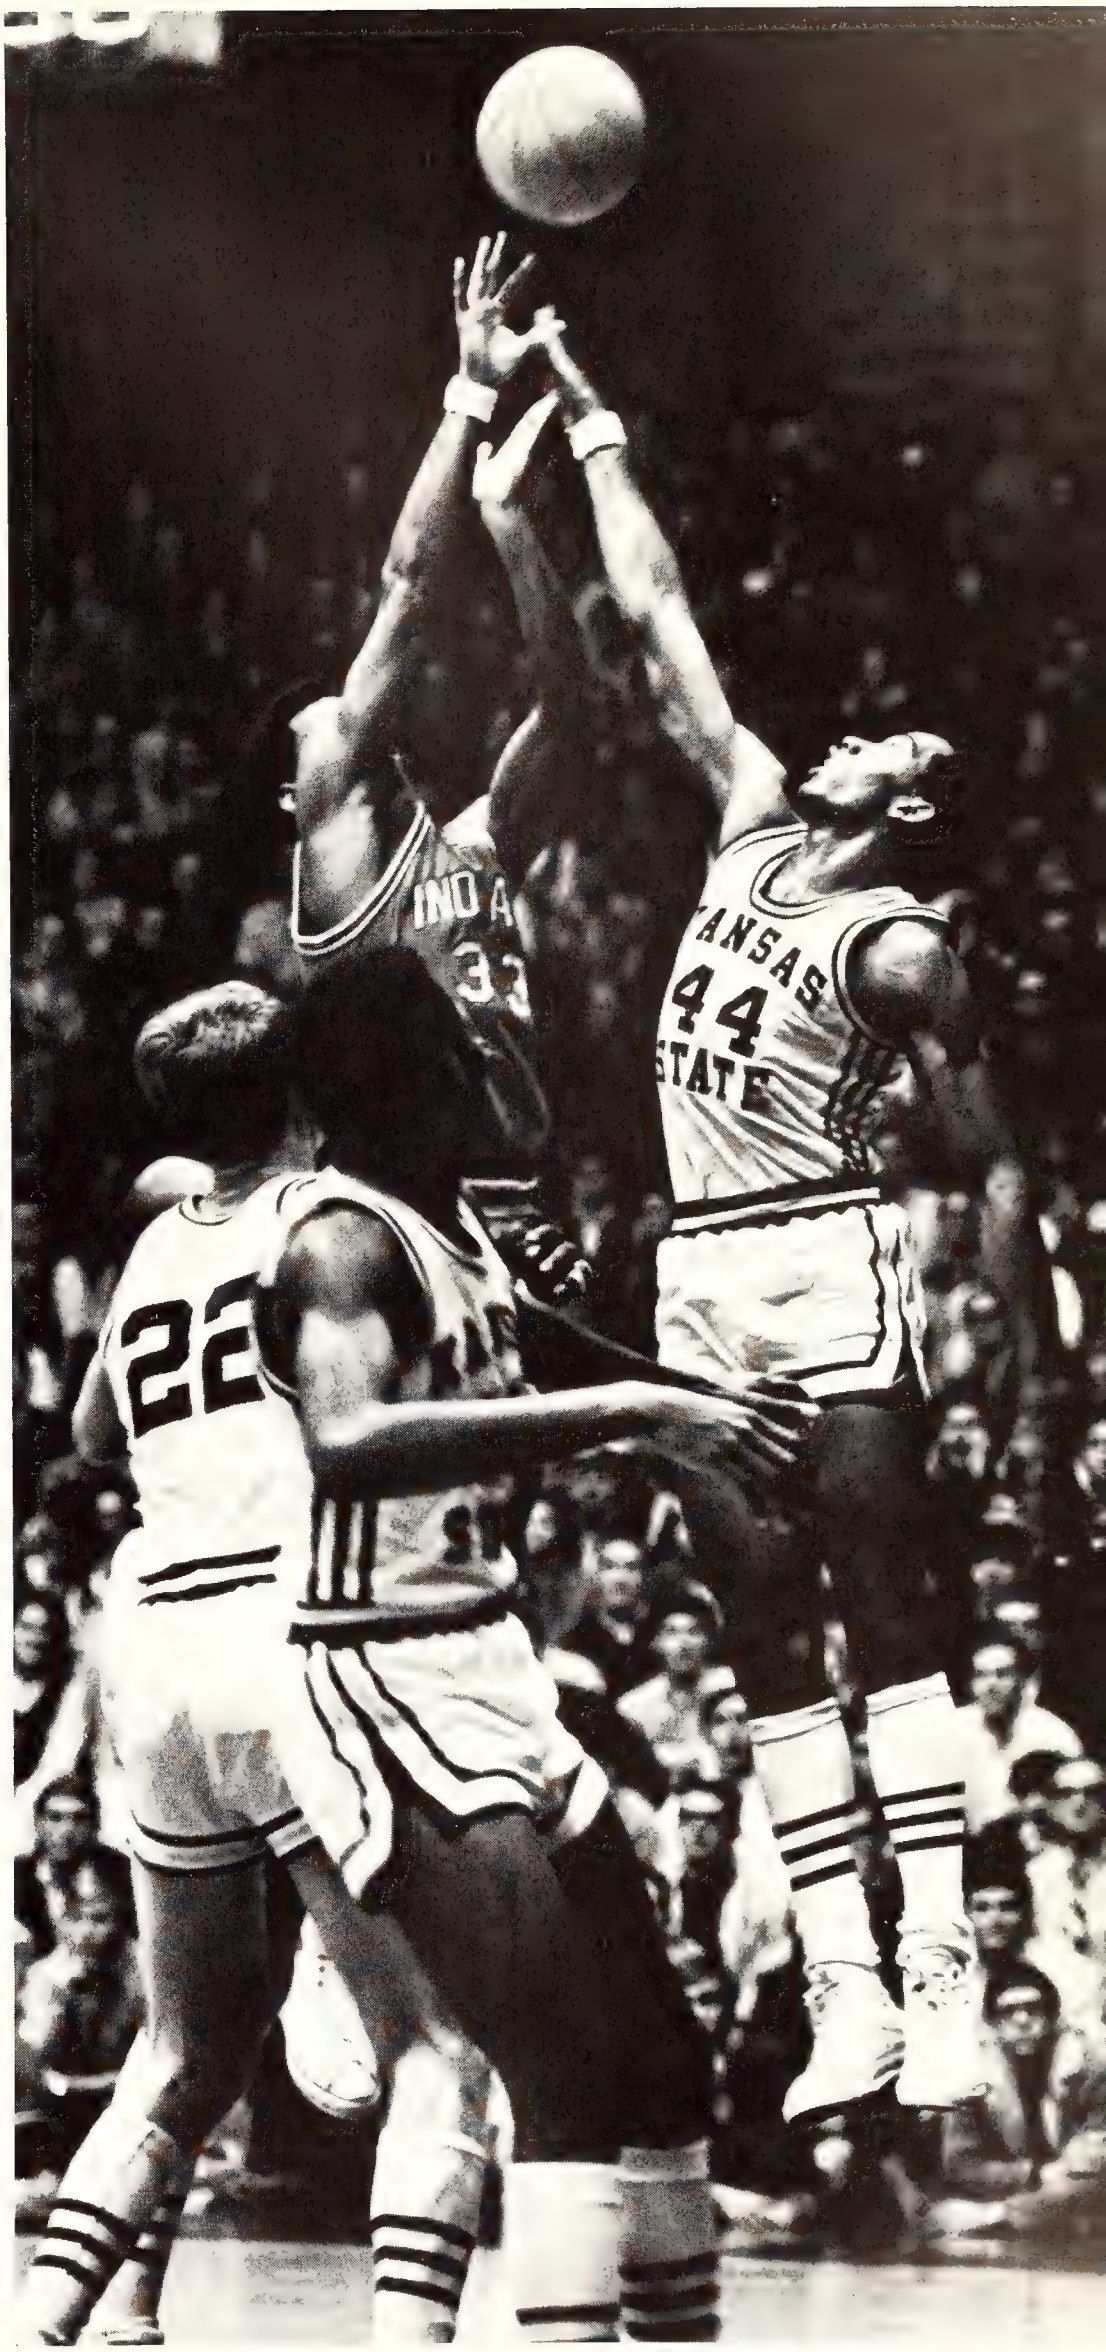
Pre-season contests projected a bleak picture for the 'Cats' 1969 basketball season.

Heading into the annual pre-season Big Eight Tournament with five losses, the Wildcats managed to beat Iowa State, but dropped two more games, to Oklahoma State and Colorado.

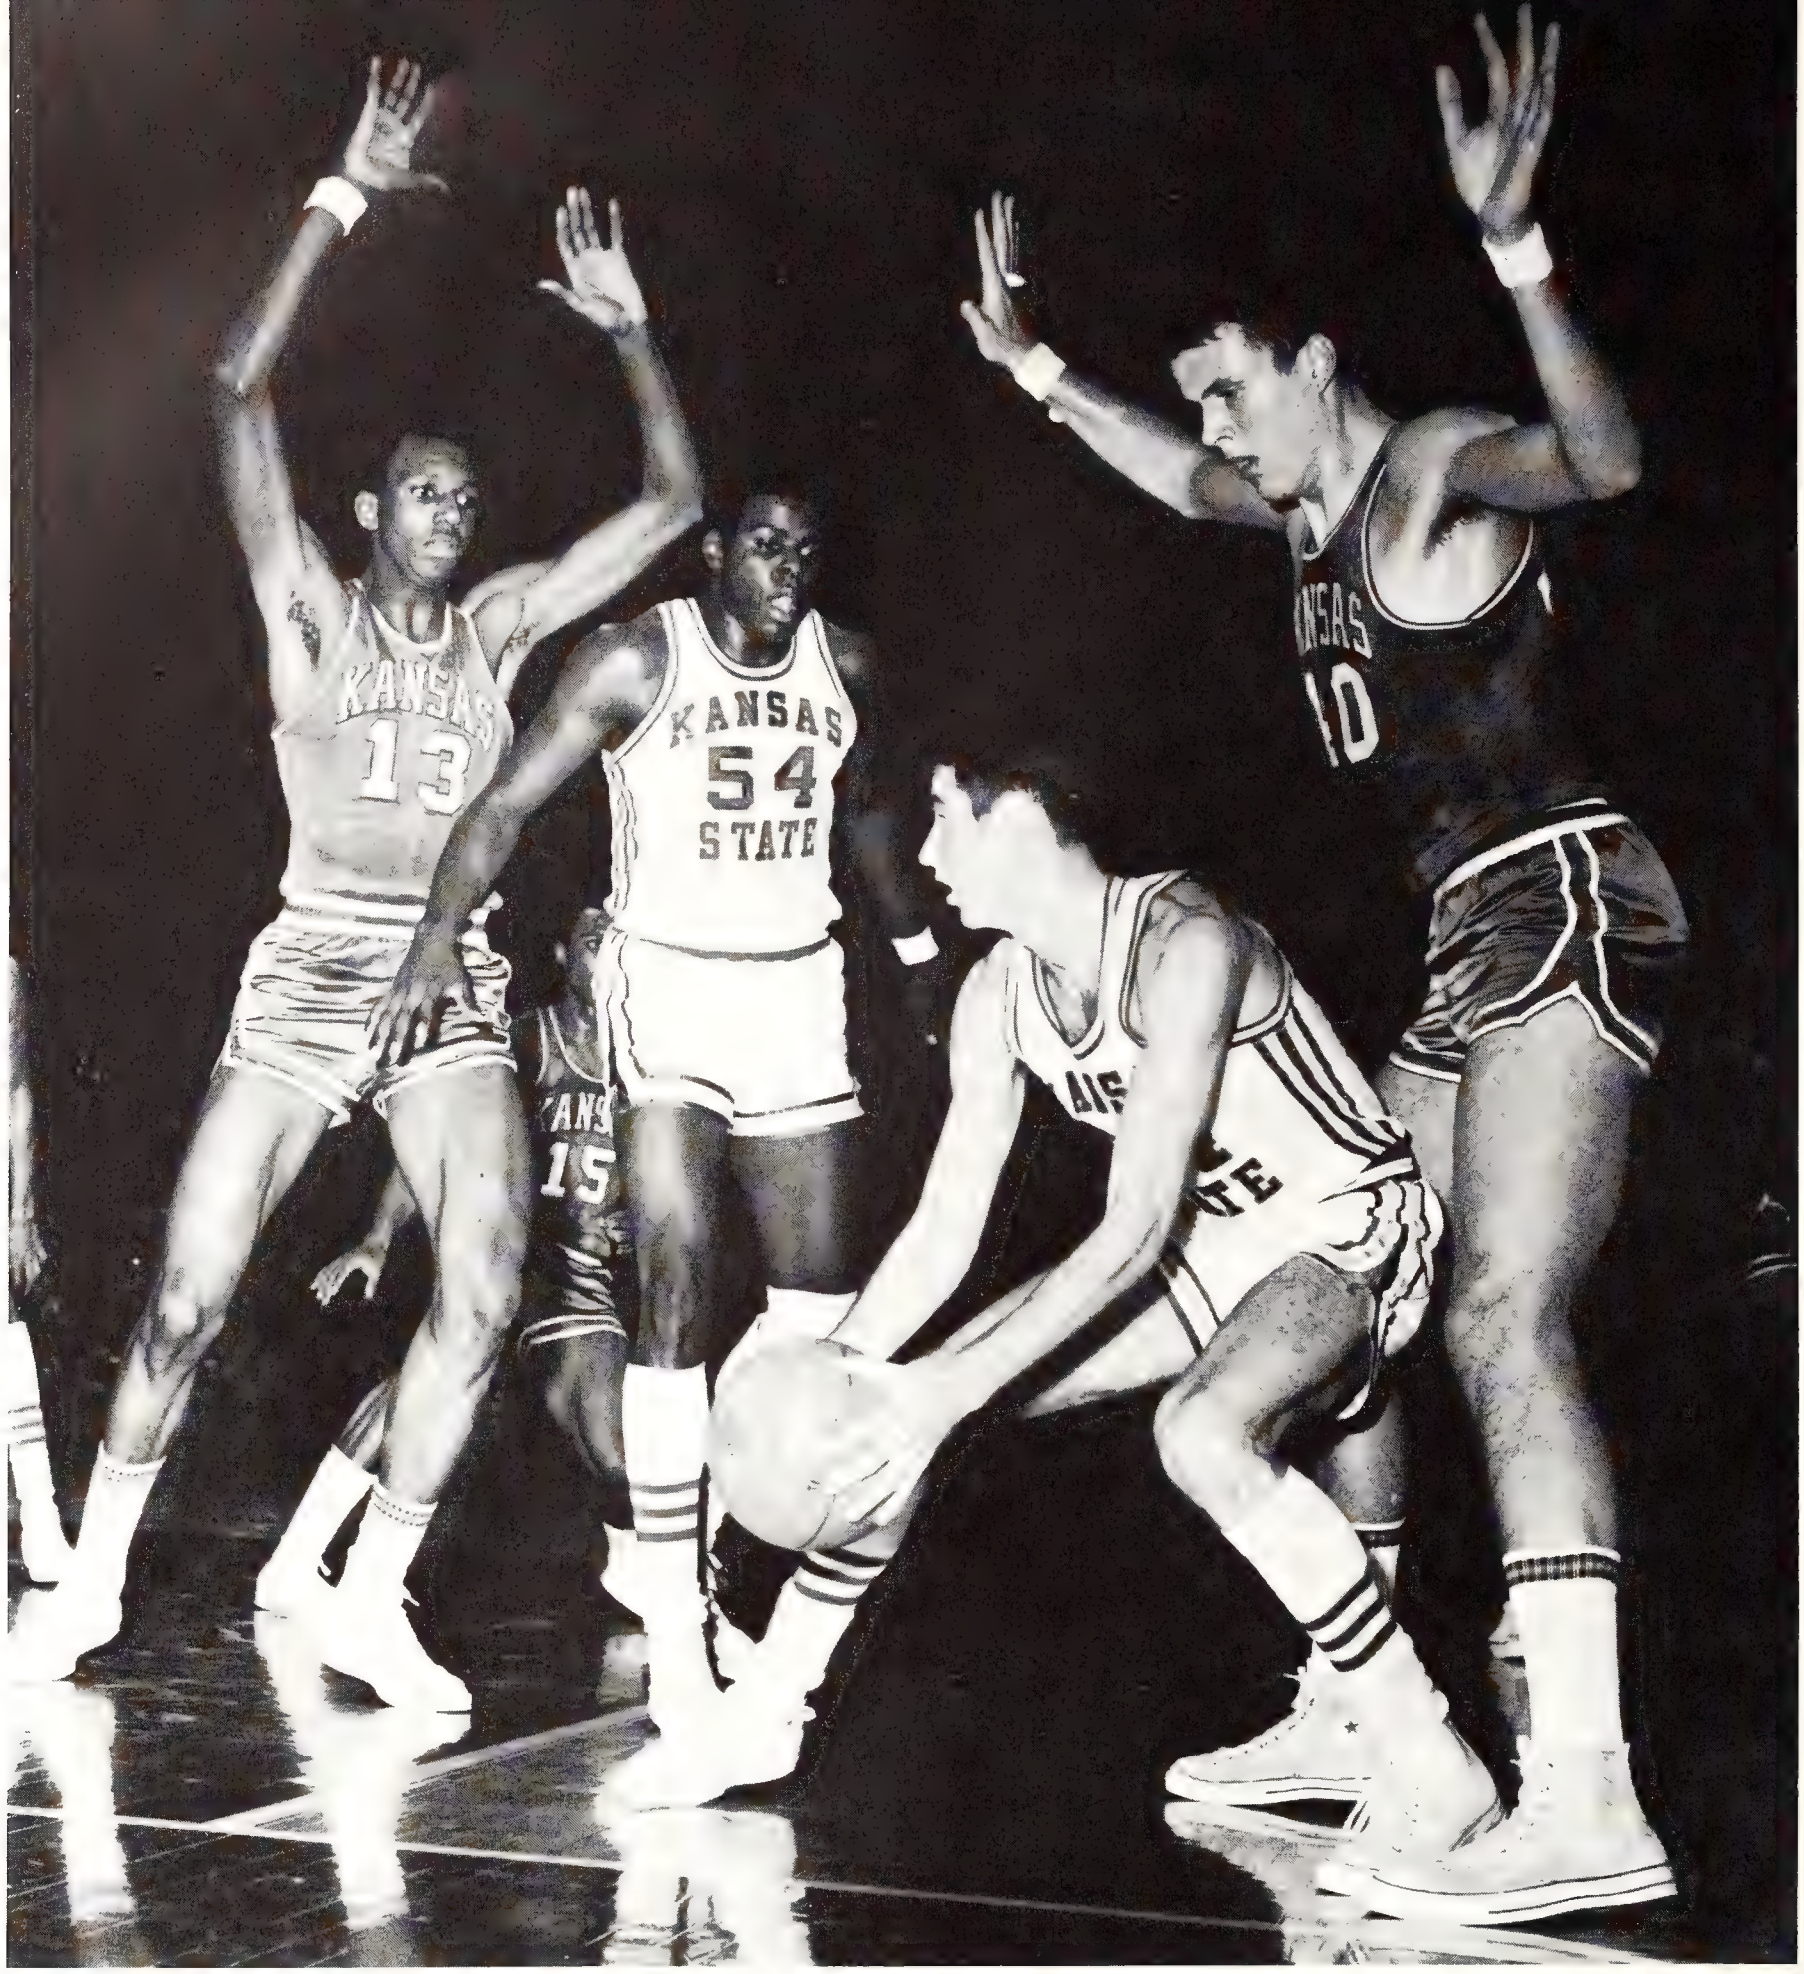
Cincinnati spelled yet another defeat for the Wildcats in their pre-season opener. After losing to Tulsa, the 'Cats picked up their first season victory in a match against Indiana where an overtime resulted in a final score of 87-83. K-State split the Sunflower double header, winning, 88-68, over Syracuse and losing to Creighton. Capturing second place in the Vanderbilt Classic Tournament, the 'Cats then lost the final game to Vanderbilt.

Cheering crowds and 6-3 guard Jeff Webb spark the Wildcats to an easy victory over Syracuse University.





Jerry Venable battles an Indiana foe for control of the tip. Overtime gave the victory to the Wildcats.



Efforts of All-American Jo Jo White in his last game of college basketball manages to overpower the 'Cats and their efforts to break the tight Jayhawk defense. The 'Cats lost the match with the rival Hawks, 67-73.

'Cats win eight games on home basketball court

Playing on their home court surrounded by enthusiastic fans proved advantageous for the Wildcats. By season's end, the 'Cats had managed to compile an 8-1 home game record.

Southern Illinois University was the only nonconference team the Wildcats met during the season. Power on the backboards enabled the 'Cats to win, 74-56. In play against the Big Eight teams, the 'Cats split with all teams except Oklahoma. After suffering a loss to Iowa State earlier in the season, the Wildcats applied an aggressive defense and downed the Cyclones, 78-73. Although lagging behind early in the game, the 'Cats came back to beat Missouri, 60-55.

Wildcat basketball team earns Big Eight second

Away from their home court, the Wildcats met with tough Big Eight teams contending for the conference title. Although winning their opener against Iowa State gave the 'Cats a good start, trouble which later developed resulted in K-State having to settle for the league's second place position at the end of the season.

Before defeating the Oklahoma Sooners, the 'Cats suffered defeats from both Colorado and Oklahoma State. Missouri and Nebraska dealt two more losses to the Wildcats before they managed to close the season using outstanding rebounding and offensive aggressiveness to beat the University of Kansas by a score of 64-57.

Opening the season with a 92-87 win over Eastern Missouri Junior College, the freshmen met with a 74-69 defeat in overtime against Merramec Juco. This was the team's only loss in their five games against junior college teams. One of the Wildcats' major victories was over nationally ranked Murray Junior College. In Big Eight play, the freshmen suffered four losses. Kansas was the only school to upset the young 'Cats twice, but the team still could only manage to split one and one with both Oklahoma State and Nebraska.

With a fall season record of five wins, two losses and one tie, the soccer team headed for the Big Eight tourney in April. Defending their unbeaten record early in the season, the 'Cats defeated the Omaha Kickers with a score of 7-2. Defense was up against one of the toughest contenders in the league. Another win quickly followed as the team bombed Emporia State, 8-0, while playing on home territory. Goalies aided the defense by keeping a well-locked door to Emporia's goal. Later in the season, K-State avenged an earlier loss to the Jayhawks with a win of 4-1. This match was the season's highlight as Regis Leal scored all four of the goals made in the contest.

Baseball team tops KU, takes Big Eight second

Kansas State nabbed second place in the Big Eight when the baseball team won two of three games against the University of Nebraska. The 'Cats dropped a four-game series with Mississippi in pre-season play. Despite injuries and bad weather, they returned to win two games of a tri-pleheader against Kansas. Contributing to the outstanding season were pitcher Nick Horner (7-0) and hard-hitting left fielder Jack Woolsey who earned all-American honors.

Good coaching, hitting, pitching get 'Cats top berth

Good coaching, hard hitting and outstanding pitching combined to earn the Wildcat baseball team second place in the Big Eight for the 1968 season. Under coach Bob Brasher, the baseball team has risen from the cellar to second place in the league during the past four seasons. The 'Cats finished the season with 13 wins and seven losses in Big Eight play bringing the stickmen closer to a league pennant than any University team had come in the previous 35 seasons.

Two losses to Colorado late in the season forced K-State to settle for second place. An early three-game sweep over Iowa State kept title hopes alive, but cancellation of the series with first place Oklahoma State and third place Oklahoma narrowed the 'Cats chances for the league title.

Brad Schlesinger led a strong pitching staff although he was injured for most of the 'Cats' season.

K-State captured first place in the freshman mile run with a time of 4:12.1. Terry Holbrook won the 440-yard dash title from Olympian Clifton Forbes of Nebraska and Dave Peterson took the 1,000-yard dash with a time of 2:11.2. In their opening game of the season, the wrestlers rolled past Wayne State, 25-14. The team picked up its second win when defeating the Drake Bulldogs, 28-10. At the Missouri Valley Amateur Athletic Union, the 'Cats won eight of the 11 classes and in the Mid-Season Tournament at Stillwater they placed fourth. Winning seven of the 11 matches gave the team a 23-14 victory over Nebraska, but the 'Cats later suffered their worse loss of the season, 35-0, from nationally ranked grapplers representing Iowa State University.

'Cat netmen tie for third in Big Eight tournament

Wildcat netmen completed the 1968 season with six wins and six losses and finished in a three way tie with Kansas and Colorado for third in the Big Eight tennis tournament. The team was composed of four returning lettermen including seniors Jim Hastings and Richard Dickson who placed in the Big Eight tournament finals.

Early in play the netmen defeated Washburn in non-conference play and split their meet with Wichita. Kansas State kept a hold on third place by defeating Air Force but ended fifth in total points from a loss to Colorado.

K-State coeds compete in national college rodeo

Winning the barrel racing and goat tying contests at the Great Plains College Rodeo qualified coeds on the University rodeo team to compete in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo at Sacramento, Calif. Barb Socolofsky returned to defend her national title as the 1968 All-Around Cowgirl and one member of the men's team also traveled to compete in the national contest.

Sponsored by the Chaparajos Club, the team was a member of the NIRA. Money won from entry fees helped to pay the team's expenses.

Golf team ends season with wins in 12 matches

Balance and team effort proved the winning combination for the Wildcats in their 1968 opening triple-dual meet against Kansas, Washburn and Ft. Hays State College.

On the road with a 6-2 record, the 'Cats added a win and two ties at Lawrence, returned home to win over Oklahoma State, then lost three meets. Traveling on to Ames, the 'Cats downed Drake, Iowa State and tied with Kansas. But disappointment came later when the Wildcats lost two of three matches at the University of Nebraska.

Dropping to eleventh place in the Pikes Peak Invitational Tournament, the 'Cats took a 12-9-3 dual meet record into the Big Eight Golf Championship meet at Boulder. K-State golf squad ended play with a sixth place tournament ranking.

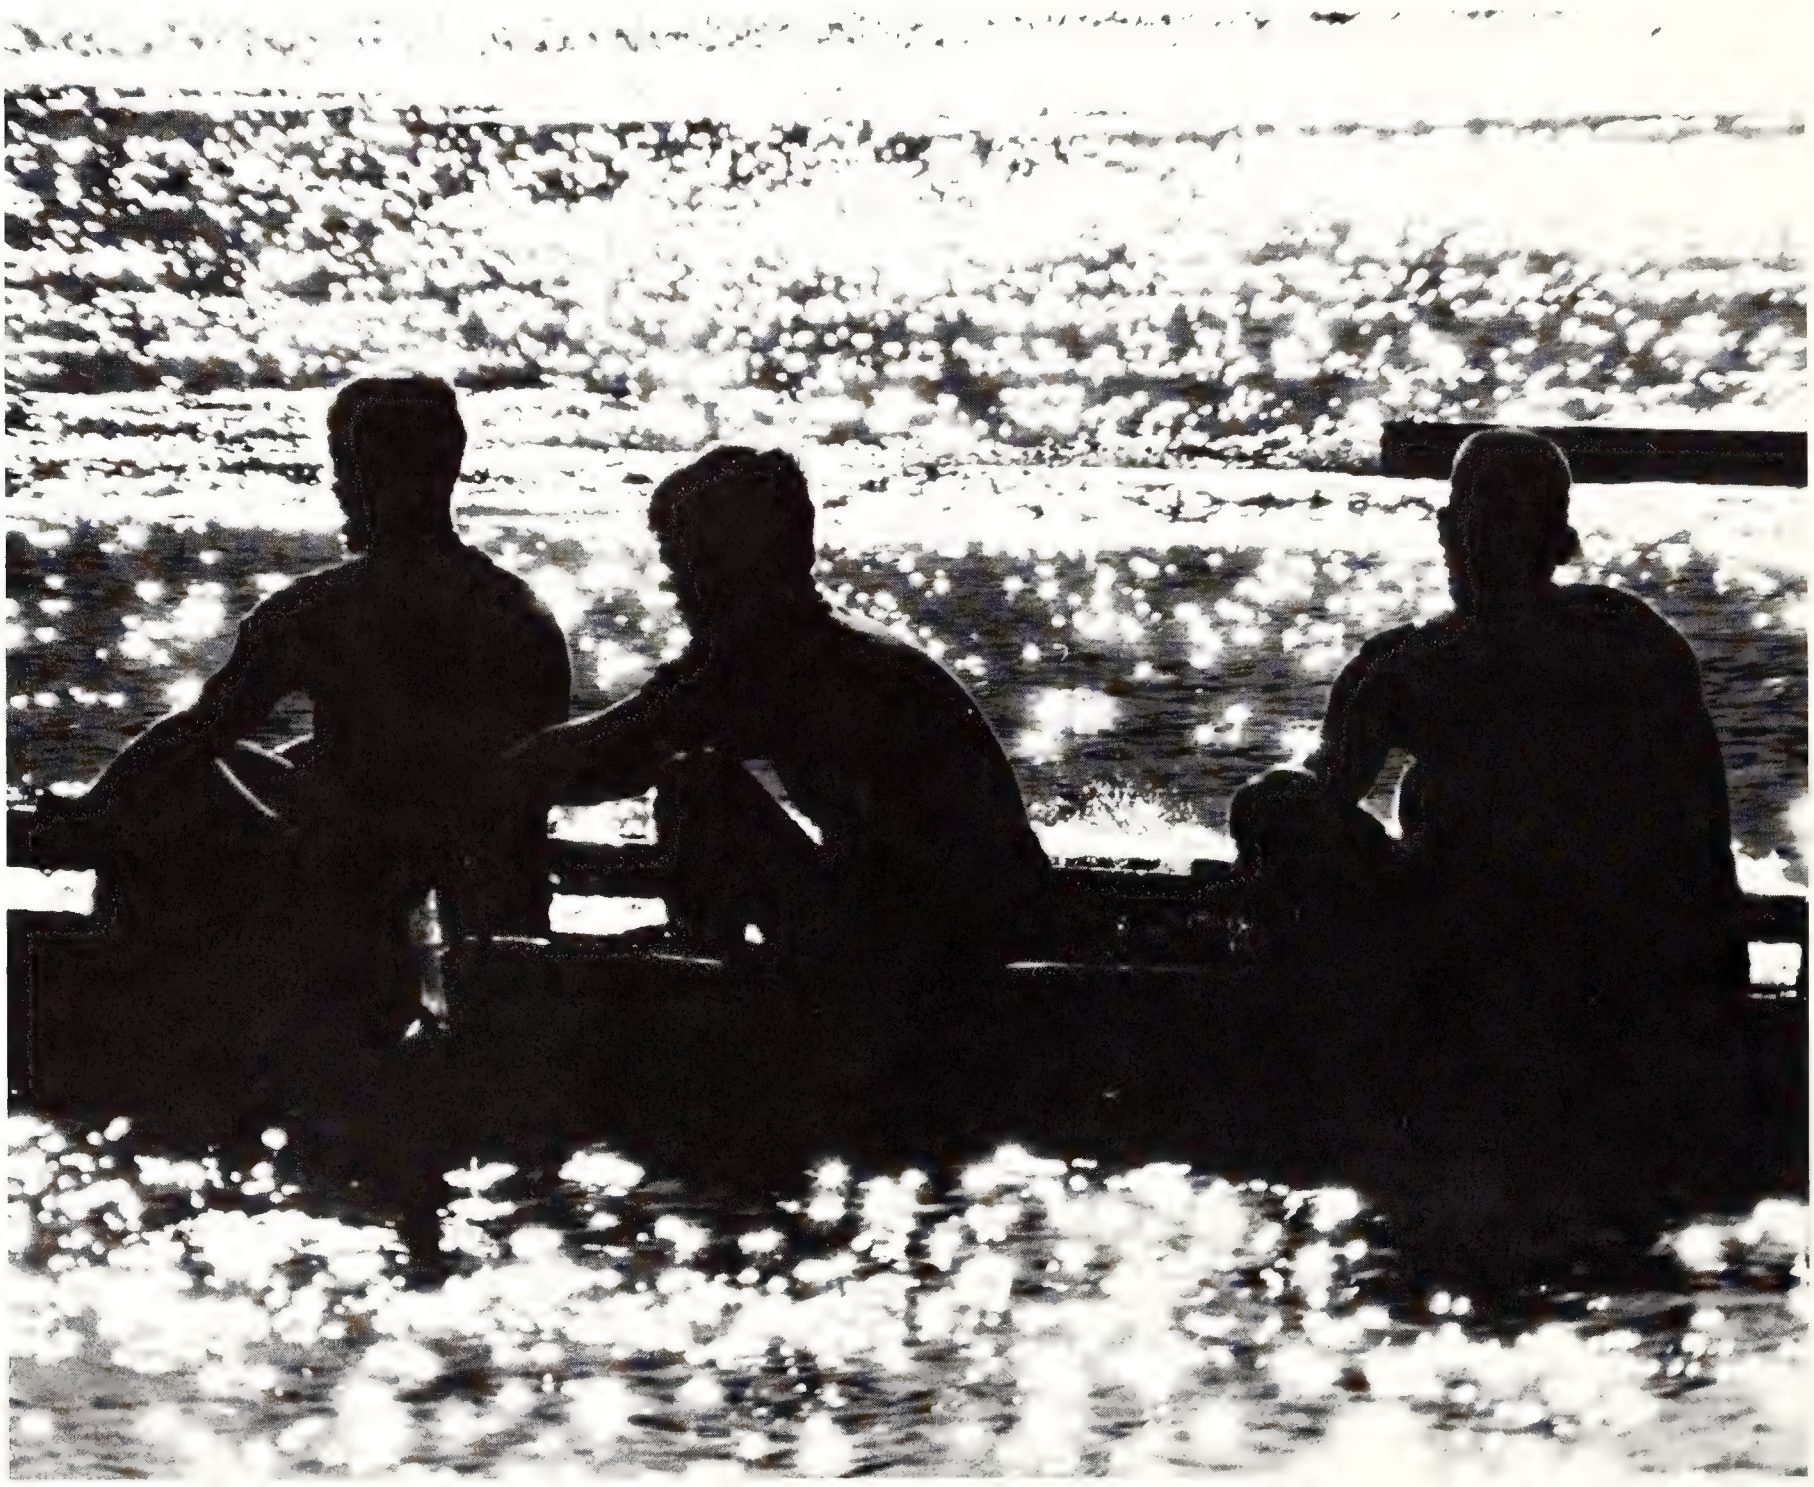
Rowing team coach Don Rose shouts instructions to the team at an afternoon practice at Tuttle Creek.

Crew competes in trials for Olympic positions

International competition faced the rowing team after their schedule was broadened to include Mexican Olympic squad and Canadian oarsmen. At the Heart of America Invitational Regatta in Topeka, the crew dedicated a new $30,000 boathouse and christened a new 18-oared racing shell. The team placed first in junior heavyweight doubles at Northwestern, but lost to Alabama. K-State finished second at Minnesota and ranked fifth at Marietta, Ohio. Other scheduled meets included contests at Ontario and at the Olympic trials in Longbeach.



Silhouetted against Tuttle Creek's waters, oarsmen pause during an afternoon practice for a future meet.

Bowlers host, compete in Midstates tournament

For the first time, the K-State bowling teams acted as hosts for the Midstates Traveling League Tournament in which teams from Wichita State, Kansas and Oklahoma State competed.

Coed bowlers gave up their 1967-68 title, but secured third in the women's division of the traveling league tournament. Former Leavenworth Junior Women's Champion Nancy Bond anchored the team by averaging 168 points per game during the 1968-69 season competition.

Ken Fyler won high honors for the men's team in the Union No-Tap Tournament while the team finished second in the Westark Invitational Collegiate Tournament at Ft. Smith. Top team scorer was Larry Weyer who finished with a season average of 190 points per game.

Women's rifle team members ranked third in the nation after capturing first place at both the Oklahoma State and Nebraska Invitationals.

Jim Richardson won the National Sectional in the ROTC competition while the men's team placed fourth. The men also ended in fourth place when shooting against 35 schools in the Oklahoma State Invitational. They emerged first, however, in the Old Troopers Match at Ft. Riley by outshooting 5th Army personnel and civilians participating in the meet.

Headed by their new coach Sergeant John Nesler and financed by the University and ROTC, the rifle team attended 25 matches during the year.

Council expands program of intramural competition

Policies regulating intramural sports were formulated by the Intramurals Council, created in March, 1968 and later placed under the office of the vice-president for student affairs.

Expansion was the key for both womens' and mens' intramurals. New sports added to the women's program were table tennis and canoeing and new uniforms were provided for the members of the inter-collegiate basketball team.

Men's football incorporated a "Super Bowl" into its regular playing season and for track oriented athletes, cross country was initiated.

K-State's first women's basketball team was asked to play in Texas' Invitational Tournament in March.

In addition to coaching the rowing team, Don Rose carries out the duties of director of intramurals.

Classes

Students represent transition amid the permanence of the University. New fans replace missing ones at a tense football game and another class of seniors clowns for one last time. As students converge toward a common goal, they sense that graduation is the end of one phase linking them to the University and the beginning of another phase of development apart from the University.

Seniors contribute $3,000 to construct outdoor mall

Enthusiasm keynoted the 2,350-member 1969 senior class. After casting a record 670 votes in the election of class officers in the spring of 1968, more than 1,000 seniors bought activity tickets during fall registration. Approximately $3,000 was raised from ticket sales to finance the proposed class project, a mall designed as a meeting area and outdoor classroom. Purchase of an activity ticket also entitled a senior to a class sweatshirt, admission to all class parties and a seat in the section reserved for seniors at the final home football and basketball games of the Wildcats.

From 102 nominations submitted by college councils and living groups, a committee composed of the director of Student Publications, the Royal Purple adviser and editorial board selected 30 students to recognize as outstanding seniors. Chosen by the staff for their scholarship, leadership and service, the outstanding seniors are pictured throughout the senior section.

Graduates are attentive as President James A. McCain delivers his "Charge to the Class" before conferring degrees.

Slowed by the freshly fallen blanket of snow, students trudge past Denison on their way to class.

Undergrad enrollment reaches record of 10,705

Undergraduate enrollment soared to a record 10,705 students, an increase of almost 1,000 students over last year. Freshmen topped the enrollment figures after 3,064 filed through registration in the fall. Sophomores claimed 2,387 members while juniors accounted for 2,275 students. Although the ratio of men to women in past years had been approximately two to one, the increase in coed undergraduates moved it closer to a one to one basis. In addition to representing the 50 states, the Canal Zone, Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, 400 undergrads were classified as international students. Approximately 15 per cent of the students were out-of-state residents.

Lured outside by the sunny spring weather, students relax away from the usual study and class schedules.

Acknowledgments . . .

There are many people who deserve credit for producing this yearbook. Here are a few of the many I give special thanks to —

Cathy Gerlinger with the smiling face and the business staff, her personalized notes kept them aware of their duties; Alice Leahy, who always has the copy at her finger tips, and the editorial staff for coming through time after time; Mary Hayes and the photographers that came and left, for handling the variety of daily assignments; the section editors for keeping things in order and especially Jenny Dunbar for doing both the underclass and senior sections of the book.

Besides the student photographers there are a number of professionals that came to our service: Laurence Blaker of the Studio Royal, David von Riesen of University Photographic Services, Don Richards of Photography House, Topeka, and Rich Clarkson of the Topeka Daily Capital.

I am indebted to a number of talented people for their journalistic advice: Sharon Smith, graduate assistant adviser, Jim Morris, director of Student Publications and C. J. (Chief) Medlin, friend.

Appreciation to those involved in the printing and production of the Royal Purple: Frank Wright, Dick Gibson, Steve Maxwell and Gary Zook at the American Yearbook Company in Topeka and Bob Merriman at the Durand Manufacturing Company in Chicago.

Sincere personal thanks are given to my father, mother and sister for patience, understanding and trust during this period.

Victor Shalkoski, Editor
